STOCKS DOWN AGAIN, BUT BANKS ARE EASY

Bargain Hunters in Wall Street When Market Unaccountably Declines to Low Levels.

RAID ON STEEL AND COPPER

Smelters Fell 6⅜, Central 2⅛, Lead 3¾, Gas 2¾, Missouri Pacific 2½—Unlisted Securities Driven Hard.

Stocks dropped yesterday to a point that was nearer a collapse than anything that has been seen in the market since the bear raids of two years ago. There were at the close such losses in active issues as 6⅜ in American Smelting and Refining, 2⅝ in Amalgamated Copper, 1⅞ in Missouri, Kansas & Texas, 3¾ in National Lead, 2⅛ in New York Central, 2⅛ in Colorado Fuel and Iron, 2¾ in Consolidated Gas, 5¼ in Delaware & Hudson, 1⅝ in Erie, 2⅝ in Great Northern ore certificates, 1⅛ in Great Northern preferred, 1¾ in Interborough common and 1⅞ in the preferred, 2½ in Missouri Pacific, 2½ in Reading, 2½ in Utah Copper, 3 in Wabash preferred, 1⅝ in United States Steel, 1⅞ in Union Pacific, and 2⅛ in Southern Pacific.

The day's trading totaled 1,661,299 shares, and there was a noticeably large participation by the commission houses and odd-lot specialists. After the market one of the largest commission houses reported a large day's buying orders than it has since the bargain hunter was abroad in the Street after the panic.

Ample Funds in the Banks.

The weakness in the stock market, instead of coming at a time when the banks are unprepared to advance accommodation finds the loans of the New York City banks well under the amount of their deposits, while their cash reserves have been added to very largely during recent weeks by the great inflow of cash from the interior. As bankers view the situation, there is removed from the present position of the stock market any likelihood of the banks being forced to curtail accommodation. The absence of an unfavorable bank condition is regarded as a relief of the situation.

The gains in cash recently made by the banks have brought the surplus reserve of the Clearing House banks up to the comfortable figure of over $33,000,000, representing a reserve loaning capacity of $125,000,000 or more. Besides this large increase in the reserve of the banks their comfortable position is further indicated by the fact that the recent changes in the bank position have again brought the loans under the amount of the deposits.

Market Opened a Point Off.

The break was coincident with the opening, which showed declines running from large factions to 1 point in practically all of the prominent issues, with the exception of Reading, which was put up ⅜. A brief rally carried a few of the active issues back to Wednesday's closing prices at the end of the first hour, but a fresh flood of offerings swamped whatever support there was and carried the whole market down.

As has been the case in almost every market since the collapse of the Hocking pool a number of the specialties, which have been looked upon as having artificial support, were conspicuously weak, and rumors were widely circulated of trouble among several houses which are known to be heavily committed in stocks that have a narrow market. The mid-day slump carried a number of active issues to the lowest levels of the new year, and when United States Steel common broke through the support around 80 and dropped to 78⅝ and then to 78 there was heavy liquidation which carried with it the leading speculative railroad and industrial issues for losses of from 2 to 3 points or more.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock there was some recovery despite a determined drive against Amalgamated Copper which sent that issue below 76, the rally reaching one point, in some instances, although the trading was in reduced volume on the recovery.

Some of the inactive issues which were conspicuously weak were Vulcan Detinning, which lost 7 points; American Hide and Leather preferred, 4¾ points; Allis-Chalmers preferred, 5½; American Cotton Oil, 4¾ points; 2½ in Kansas City Southern, 2½ in Lake Erie & Western, 4 in New York Air Brake, 2¾ in Pacific Mail, 2¼ in People's Gas, 3¾ in Peoria & Eastern, 2¾ in Pressed Steel Car, 3¼ in Pullman, and 3¼ in Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing.

BECK SEES PANIC COMING

Roosevelt's a Zephyr to What Sherman Act's Will Be.

Echoes of James M. Beck's attack on the Sherman anti-trust law at the annual dinner of the Pennsylvania Bankers' Association in Philadelphia on Wednesday night aroused wide iterest in Wall Street yesterday, although at Mr. Beck's office it was said that the speech had been extemporaneous, and no verbatim report of Mr. Beck's words had been taken.

As reported, Mr. Beck did not hesitate to talk plainly, and the sentiment of the Pennsylvania bankers was plainly with him as was shown by the wild applause and shouts of: "Oh, you Jimmy Beck!" when he finished a general letting loose, which is not often seen when Philadelphia business men get together.

"If the Sherman anti-trust act is enforced against the railroads," he said, "there will be a panic to which the Roosevelt panic would be the merest zephyr."

Mr. Beck took as his text a sentence from President Taft's message, in which he outlined his purpose of investigating the corporations in which there might be suspicion of violations of the Sherman anti-trust law, adding that such an investigation and possible prosecution of corporations would necessarily tend to disturb the confidence of the business community, to dry up the now flowing sources of capital from its places of hoarding, and produce a halt in our prosperity that would cause suffering and strained circumstances among the innocent many for the faults of the guilty few.

"That this extraordinary statement was equally distinguished by its candor and its accuracy was evident," said Mr. Beck, "for hardly was the ink dry upon the message when the prophecy was verified to the letter. Again came the crumbling of values, the failure of banking institutions, and the impairment and temporary disturbance of confidence. The extent of this loss in the last fortnight may be measured by the fact that the common stock of the Union Pacific Railroad system alone has shrunk $80,000,000, and while it may be true that with some these losses will be but temporary, with others they will be only too permanent.

FOUGHT IN WAR FOR LINCOLN.

Statue of President's Personal Substitute May Be Erected.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The soldier who fought through the civil war as the personal substitute of Abraham Lincoln is to have a statue erected in commemoration of his services. Few persons know that President Lincoln sent a substitute to the front in the civil war, but the substitute's name will be engraved in the niche of fame if the bill providing for a statue in his honor becomes a law. A bill appropriating $20,000 for the purpose was presented in the House to-day by Representative Palmer (Democrat) of Pennsylvania.

The name of this hitherto almost unknown man is J. Summerfield Staples of Stroudsburg, Penn. He died there some ten years ago, and it is at Stroudsburg that it is proposed to erect the statue. In the little burial ground at Stroudsburg a small tablet to-day marks the resting place of Staples bearing on its face the inscription: "Here lies the body of J. Summerfield Staples, representative recruit of Abraham Lincoln."

In 1863, when the fortunes of the Federal Government were at their lowest ebb, it was decided by President Lincoln and his Cabinet that they should send personal substitutes to the front as an example to the country. President Lincoln directed his Adjutant General to choose for him a suitable substitute, whom Mr. Lincoln requested should be "as nearly a perfect man physically and morally" as could be found. The Adjutant General first saw young Staples on the streets of Washington and explained to him the President's proposition. The young Pennsylvanian, who was then 18 years of age, accepted instantly and was taken to the White House to meet the President.

Bestowing upon him his benediction, Mr. Lincoln sent forth the young soldier to join his regiment. He enlisted in the Second District of Columbia Volunteers and served until the close of the war.

No particular record of valor or heroic service is recorded in favor of Lincoln's substitute, but the annals of the War Department show that Staples served throughout the war with honor to himself and his country.

SUICIDE ENDANGERS OTHERS.

Three Knocked Unconscious by Explosion in Gas-Filled Flat.

James McDermott, 82 years old, who was employed as a conductor by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit up to several weeks ago, when he was discharged, committed suicide yesterday afternoon, when his wife, Annie, left their home, at 327 Snediker Avenue, in the East New York section of Brooklyn, about 3:45 o'clock. Taking a tube from the kitchen gas stove, he attached it to a gas jet in one of the bedrooms, lay down on the bed, and then inhaled the gas.

The tube fell from his mouth after he lost consciousness. McDermott had barred the door and had filled up all the cracks and crevices he could find before he started to kill himself. The rooms were filled with gas.

At 5 o'clock his wife returned home. She could not open the door, which was bolted on the inside, and she called for aid. Samuel Green, who lives on a floor above the McDermotts, and Mrs. Mary Sigman of 323 Snediker Avenue, Brooklyn, came to help her.

They broke in the door, and at the same time one of the three struck a match. An explosion followed, and the apartment was set on fire. Mrs. McDermott, Mrs. Sigman, and Samuel Green were knocked unconscious.

The explosion brought all the tenants of the house to the street. Policemen Gerhardt and Cheruskin stumbled over the three unconscious persons as soon as they entered the McDermott apartment. They carried them down stairs and into the homes of neighbors, where they were treated. Gerhardt went back up stairs, plunged through the smoke and flame inside the burning apartment, and finally came upon McDermott's body lying on the bed. He carried it down stairs. Dr. Graham said that McDermott had been dead for an hour before the fire started.

The firemen confined the flames to the McDermott flat.

PAULHAN IN AIRSHIP WRECK.

Crashes Through Fence at Denver, but Escapes Serious Injury.

DENVER, Col., Feb. 3.—Louis Paulhan had a narrow escape from death to-day when his Farman biplane collided with the fence guarding the race track at Overland Park, smashed through it, and came down, a heap of wreckage. Paulhan was thrown headlong, but beyond a severe shaking up escaped unharmed.

Before the accident Paulhan had successfully guided his machine up into the raw mountain air and had circled the Overland race track a dozen times. He then came to the ground, and it was announced that he would attempt to fly over the business district of Denver, three or four miles away, and return.

The runway for his machine was not over 140 yards long and was cramped by the race track fence and by an irrigation ditch running diagonally across the grounds. The machine left the ground too close to the fence, struck it, and rebounded, breaking one of the starting wheels. Paulhan shut off his motor and brought the machine to a stop.

The machine was repaired, and again Paulhan attempted a flight. The biplane was not three feet from the ground when the end of the runway was reached, and the machine crashed through the fence into the ditch, rebounded, and came down, a mass of wreckage. Paulhan was fairly catapulted from his seat, but he lit in the soft snow, escaping serious injury.

A dozen or more people were knocked down by the machine when it tore through the fence, but no one was seriously hurt.

HURT IN SUBWAY, ARRESTED.

Man Whose Arm Was Injured Held for Resenting It.

Charged with assaulting a special officer in the Subway, who had twice jammed a car door shut on his arm, Bolling P. Sharp, an electrical engineer of 40 Pinson Place, Rockaway, declared that he had missed the officer, which he regretted.

"I struck at him," Sharp said, "but the blow didn't land. I wanted to punch his face off."

The special officer, who gave his name as Schoales, was packing passengers into a Brooklyn express train at the Fourteenth Street station last evening, according to the stories told in the police station, and when he jammed the door shut Sharp's arm was still sticking out. Schoales opened the door, but again there wasn't room for Sharp's arm, and it was again caught when the door closed. Sharp cried out in pain, and Schoales opened the door again.

Then, Schoales alleges, Sharp struck him a hard blow in the jaw, nearly knocking him down, and he arrested him.

In the Mercer Street Police Station Schoales wanted to make a charge of disorderly conduct against Sharp, but the desk Lieutenant told him it would have to be assault or nothing, so he made it assault. The special officer had no bruises to show.

TRANSFER FOLLOWS LAW ENFORCEMENT

Mounted Policemen Who Made Excise Arrests Quickly Put to East Side Patrolling.

TACKLED LIQUOR PRESIDENT

Three Prisoners Held, but Men Are Doing Penance—"For Good and Sufficient Reason," Baker Says.

Charles Cunningham and Thomas Keenan, mounted policemen in the Westchester Precinct, enforced the excise law in Westchester Village last Sunday. At 8 o'clock yesterday morning Policeman Cunningham reported for duty at the Eldridge Street Station and Policeman Keenan at the Madison Street Station, both on the lower east side in the most undesirable precincts in the city. They have been dismounted, and at 2 o'clock this afternoon will begin to pound the pavements, as they sometimes term infantry duty in the Police Department.

Commissioner Baker, when asked about these transfers yesterday, sent word to a TIMES reporter that they were made "for good and sufficient reasons." It was freely predicted in the Police Department last night that Mayor Gaynor, judging by the interest he is taking in police administration, would soon be asking the Commissioner what these "good and sufficient reasons" were.

In the course of Sunday, Cunningham and Keenan gathered into the Westchester Station bartenders representing three of the best-known liquor dealers in that section. One of Cunningham's prisoners was Ernest Olpp, President of the Westchester Liquor Dealers' Association, whose place is often referred to as "the little tavern in the hollow." The others whose places of business were the scenes of arrests were John Schussler of Havemeyer and Tremont Avenues and Charles Wagner of Castle Hill and Westchester Avenues. The next morning Cunningham and Keenan testified against the prisoners in the Westchester Court, and all three were held for Special Sessions on charges of violating the excise law.

Then things began to happen. Cunningham and Keenan have been up in Westchester a long time. They live up there, and both are known and respected there. Everybody in the village heard about the arrests, and some of the braver spirits even sought out and congratulated the two policemen on their work. Then rumors began to fly as to what was going to happen to the law enforcers. It was freely predicted that both would soon be doing some sort of disagreeable duty far from their home comforts. They were.

Inspector Flood is in command of the Bronx, which takes in the Westchester Precinct. At his headquarters at the Tremont Avenue Station it was said yesterday that the Inspector had gone away and was not expected back until to-day. No one else seemed to know where the Inspector could be found.

At the Westchester Police Station it was admitted that Cunningham and Keenan had been dismounted and transferred to the lower east side. The precinct official who admitted this said he did not know why the transfers had been made unless they were "for the good of the service," as most transfers were. He verified the stories of last Sunday's excise arrests, and said that the prisoners had been held for trial.

"You know, I suppose," said the reporter, "that it is rumored that those excise arrests were the cause of the transfers?"

"Yes, I have heard something like that," was the answer, "but we have transfers every day or so, and nothing is ever said about them."

"But the transfers don't usually follow the making of arrests for violations of the liquor laws, do they?"

"Certainly not, but in this case it must be only a coincidence. Both men, you may be sure, were sent downtown for the good of the service."

One of the stories in circulation regarding the transfers was that before they were made Inspector Flood had the men before him and delivered a severe lecture to them on their actions on Sunday. No official could be found who would admit that he knew this of his own knowledge. Both Cunningham and Keenan were off on twenty-four hours' leave, which does not expire until this afternoon. Their friends said that they were both taking their transfer philosophically, and had no criticisms of their superiors to make.

Ernest Olpp was playing pinochle in the "little tavern in the hollow." Olpp is big and good-natured, except when somebody mentions the excise arrest of Sunday. His "tavern in the hollow" is one of the landmarks of Westchester Village. It is a quaint looking old place at the bottom of a big hill, below which Westchester Creek peacefully meanders.

"I understand that you had an arrest last Sunday," THE TIMES reporter said to him.

"Yes, I was, and it was an outrage," thundered the President of the Westchester Liquor Dealers' Association in reply.

"Which policeman got in here?" asked the reporter.

"That Cunningham fellow," Mr. Olpp answered, "and I see him every day going to his dinner."

"Why did he arrest your man?"

"I don't know what made him do it. I don't ever do no wrong, and I don't understand it at all. Why, I dont even know this fellow Cunningham, except by sight, for I see him every day going to his dinner."

"I suppose you know that both Cunningham and Keenan have been transferred?"

"Yes, I heard it."

"Do you know if they were transferred for making these arrests?"

"I don't know a thing about it. I only heard they were transferred, and I don't know yet whether it's true."

A neighboring storekeeper said he had heard the arrests and that the transfers followed immediately after. Both Cunningham and Keenan were considered by the people around Westchester Village as among the best policemen in the mounted squad.

At Police Headquarters the reporter was told that Commissioner Baker had gone. The reporter told the Sergeant in the Commissioner's ante-room that he wished to inquire about the Cunningham-Keenan transfers.

"Wait a minute," said the Sergeant, and vanished into the Commissioner's office. A moment later the reporter heard the telephone operator call up Inspector Flood's office at the Tremont Avenue Station. An hour later the Sergeant came out with an answer to the reporter's question.

"The Commissioner says," said the Sergeant, "that it is true that two mounted men have been transferred from the Westchester squad to patrol duty downtown. They were transferred, the Commissioner says, for good and sufficient reasons."

Whether or not Mayor Gaynor will ask for additional information in this matter is, of course, pure speculation, but the Mayor is said to be anxious to know everything that is happening in the Police Department.

In order not to miss the many notable features in next Sunday's Times it is important to place orders with news dealers to-day.

BLAME LONG HOURS FOR RAILWAY WRECK

MIXED THEIR TRAIN ORDERS

Railroad Men Testified They Had Been at Work for Some Twenty Hours with Little Chance to Rest.

NEWTON, N. J., Feb. 3.—A jury, after a long hearing to-day, will decide to-morrow the important question whether railroad men who have been compelled to work practically twenty hours at a stretch can be held responsible for a collision and consequent loss of life. The cases in point are those of Frederick E. Vance of Warwick and Thomas O'Neill of Belvidere, engineer and conductor of Train 98 on the Lehigh and Hudson River Railroad, which on Jan. 6 ran into Train 51 at Woodruff's Gap. Ira S. Becker, a fireman, lost his life in the collision.

Both men are being tried for manslaughter. The case went to the jury late this afternoon and the jurors were locked up for the night. Lawyer Martin, appearing for the men, admitted that they had violated a train order and they were apparently guilty as charged, but put the responsibility for the accident on to the railroad itself.

"What we want to show," he said, "is that the railroad company knew the men were working overtime, without rest, and did not recall them from their duties."

"I don't know how I came to leave the switch at Sparta Junction. The only reason I can give is that my mind must have been a blank due to the long hours I had been at work," said Vance in reply to a question by Mr. Martin.

The details of the story told by Vance on the stand agreed with the story told by Conductor O'Neill. Vance said that he went out of Warwick at 5:13 o'clock on the afternoon of Jan. 5. When Allentown, Penn., the end of the run was reached, he went into the caboose to try and get a much-needed rest. Trains, he said, were constantly rattling by, and he could not sleep. He dozed off for a few minutes, but never slept more than fifteen minutes while in the caboose. At 2 A. M. by mistake the entire crew were routed out. There was no rest after that, and at 5 A. M. he was back at the throttle. From that time until the wreck at noon he was busy making up his train and running toward Warwick.

Vance admitted the correctness of his orders to go onto a switch at Sparta Junction and there await the passing of train 51. He ran his train on the siding as ordered. Train 24 backed off the Susquehanna line also and this left a clear track for 51.

Vance said that when his train stopped both fire and water in the boilers were low. For ten minutes he was busy taking on water and oiling up. The fireman was busy blowing up the fire. They were so engaged, he testified, when 31 passed by from Warwick. He finished oiling as 31 went by, and climbed into his cab. As he got aboard Simpson, the head brakeman, without consulting Vance ran forward and, standing beside the switch, gave the "all right" signal.

The engineer started ahead, and as he passed over the switch Simpson climbed on board.

"Fred, blow two long blasts so the fireman won't get off the train. There is a man at the switch to close it," Vance testified Simpson said.

He looked out of the window and saw Brakeman Parsell of 24 at the switch. He knew, he said, that 24 would have to use the switch, so he gave the warning to the firemen not to get off and sent his train over the switch and out onto the main line at twelve miles an hour.

Then came the collision. Vance said he saw No. 51 coming, and then jumped through the cab window. When he came to his senses he was lying in a field near the track, with his right shoulder injured. Vance was closely questioned as to whether he had been drinking. He said that he had had neither a drink of beer or whisky for a month before the accident.

TWO DIVORCES, SAME JUDGE.

George S. Hupp Tells of Nightly Quarrels with Extravagant Wife.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 3.—George S. Hupp, a lawyer, who three years ago was divorced from Mrs. A. Hupp by Judge George H. Hutton, to-day obtained a decree from Mrs. Elsie Hupp, and again Judge Hutton decided the matter.

The Hupps were married in December, 1908, a short time after he was divorced. His second wife had obtained a divorce only a short time before from Sam Schenck, ex-Police Commissioner.

Since their marriage, Mr. Hupp stated on the stand, his wife has spent $32,000, besides borrowing money from his mother, Mrs. Rachel Hupp, for which the latter is now suing him. His health became impaired by the nightly quarrels over money matters, he told the Judge. In April, 1909, his wife arose in the middle of the night, he said, and, leaping from her bed to his, began to beat him with her fists. When he tried to dress to leave the house she pointed a revolver at him, Hupp declared, but he "escaped with his life by leaving the dwelling."

Mrs. Hupp is traveling in Europe, accompanied by her daughter, Miss Schenck.

FACULTY DROPPED QUAD PLAN

One of Them, Speaking for Princeton, Says Question Never Came to a Vote.

PRINCETON, N. J., Feb. 3.—A letter in The Princeton Alumni Weekly to-day from a professor of the Faculty takes issue with a statement published in New York that through the influence of the newly appointed preceptors President Wilson's "quad" plan was passed by the Faculty two years ago. He declares that the "quad" question never came to a vote, but that a motion which meant preclusion of debate on it was hopelessly lost. The letter says:

"In the Autumn of 1907 a motion was introduced in the Faculty to concur in the plan for the social co-ordination of the university, recently before the Board of Trustees. A substitute for this motion, requesting the Board of Trustees to appoint a joint committee of the Board and of the Faculty, together with the President, to investigate the social condition of the university in conjunction with representatives of the alumni and undergraduates, was voted upon at the next meeting, and was lost by a vote of 22 to 81, not including the votes of preceptors. This was the only vote taken by the Faculty on any motion connected with the quad question, except purely formal ones permitting modifications or withdrawals of motions. Finally by general consent the whole matter was laid on the table."

LOUIS B. ADAMS HELD FOR KIDNAPPING SON

New York Man Arrested in El Paso After Flight from San Francisco.

BOY INHERITED $300,000

Fugitives Now Held at Tucson, Arizona—Mother Got Divorce Decree and Custody of Children.

Special to The New York Times.

TUCSON, Arizona, Feb. 3.—Louis B. Adams of New York, Nathaniel Murphy, his private secretary, and Nora McLaughlin, all charged with the crime of child stealing under the laws of California, together with John B. Adams, the 8-year-old son of Louis B. Adams, were brought in from Yuma this morning by Charles H. Taylor, a San Francisco detective, and Edward Mebus of the El Paso police.

Adams, Murphy, and Miss McLaughlin, who is the boy's nurse, were arrested in El Paso on Tuesday upon a charge of having kidnapped the boy in San Francisco. Detective Taylor had with him requisition papers issued by the Governor of California, but the defendants, after consulting with a lawyer in El Paso, consented to waive legal formalities and to accompany Taylor back to San Francisco.

Accordingly the party started upon the journey to San Francisco, but at Yuma, just before the Arizona line was crossed, a writ of habeas corpus issued in behalf of the defendants by Court Commissioner Charles H. Utting at Yuma was served on Taylor. The writ was issued upon request of an attorney at Yuma, who had been employed by wire from New York. It was made returnable before Judge Campbell here, and the party came in from Yuma this morning.

The court held that the answer of Taylor was insufficent and discharged all of the defendants.

Immediately afterward Adams, Murphy, and Miss McLaughlin were rearrested upon a complaint sworn out against them by the local police, acting under instructions from the Chief of Police of San Francisco, upon a fugitive warrant. They were taken before Justice Richey, where bail was fixed at $8,000 each. Their hearing is set for Saturday.

Daisy Kimball Adams, wife of Louis B. Adams, recently instituted suit for divorce against her husband in the courts of New York, and under an interlocutory order issued there obtained the custody of her son John, and a daughter three eyars of age, who are their grandfather's heirs. Mr. Kimball, the grandfather, is a wealthy San Franciscan. A settlement had been agreed upon in the divorce suit, and Mrs. Adams was living with her father. A final decree in the divorce suit has not yet been entered.

While John was on his way to school from his home in San Francisco on Jan. 26, it is charged, he was kidnapped. Later he was taken by Adams and the nurse to San José.

On Jan. 28 Adams and the nurse took the boy to El Paso, and on Tuesday Murphy met them there. Taylor was on the same train with Murphy. As soon as Murphy alighted from the train he was joined by Adams, Miss McLaughlin, and the boy. While they were standing in a group Taylor enlisted the services of the El Paso police, and the defendants were arrested.

Adams is said to live at 258 Riverside Drive, New York.

The boy has inherited $300,000 in his own right. To-day in court in San Francisco his grandmother, Mrs. John S. Kimball, was made his legal guardian.

$50,000 FOR PEARY METEORS.

Mrs. Jesup Buys Them from Explorer's Wife for American Museum.

Mrs. Robert E. Peary, wife of the north pole discoverer, has sold for a sum said to be nearly $50,000 the three meteors brought from the arctic regions by Commander Peary, Mrs. Jesup, widow of Morris K. Jesup, who more than any other financed Commander Peary's trips, being the purchaser. Mrs. Jesup has given them to the American Museum of Natural History, where they are at present.

The meteors are the largest of iron ore composition ever found. For years arctic explorers, noticing that the Eskimos used metal tipped implements and weapons, asked where the metal came from. Their only answer was, "The iron mountain." Only the old men of the tribes even knew where it was, and they could not be induced to tell.

After several trips north Commander Peary became very friendly with the head men of the tribes and they at length told him where to find the "iron mountain." Peary found it to consist of three great meteors, 90 per cent. pure iron, the largest, called "the tent" by the natives because of its shape, weighing tons, and the finest specimen ever found. The others were known as the "woman" and the "dog." After great difficulty and considerable danger Commander Peary got them aboard his ship and brought them to New York. They were presented to Mrs. Peary and by her lent to the Museum.

GIRL STUDENTS SHUN IBSEN.

Investigation at Wellesley Disproves Common Report as to Their Hobbies.

Special to The New York Times.

WELLESLEY, Mass., Feb. 3.—Some Wellesley students, who question the statements commonly heard that every other college girl reads Maeterlinck, Shaw, and Ibsen, and that most of the others are so busy that they never get a chance to read, have taken the pains to interview 450 Wellesley undergraduates and have issued a report.

The daily reading of the newspaper, at least in a superficial way, was found to exist. Few girls admitted that they read the editorials. Of the 450 girls interviewed 250 read the weeklies with some thoroughness. Every girl reads some monthly magazine, and that mostly for the fiction. About 5 per cent. of the students read some religious magazine thoroughly.

As to novel reading, one-fifth of the 450 still read Dickens, Scott, Thackeray, and Jane Austen. About half of them confessed to the reading of the light modern novel.

The much discussed Maeterlinck, Ibsen, and Shaw were found to be read by only thirty-two out of the 450. Meredith, Stevenson, Kipling, and Mrs. Wharton are much more popular.

KIDNAPPERS THREATEN GIRL.

Jersey City Man is Bidden to Pay $3,000 as Price of Daughter's Safety.

The family of Owen J. McWilliams of 317 Arlington Avenue, Jersey City, of the McWilliams Tug Boat Company of New York, has been in a state of alarm since Tuesday morning, when a letter to Mr. McWilliams threatened that unless he paid $3,000 in cash through his eight-year-old daughter Clara she would be kidnapped.

Until yesterday McWilliams kept the matter a secret. But when, in the afternoon, a second letter reiterated the threat, he told the police. He himself has no suspicion of anything in the nature of a Black Hand plot, but his wife is exceedingly nervous.

The first letter, giving the details of how the money should be transferred through the little girl to the writers, set forth that McWilliams should signify his consent by tying a red ribbon to the knob of his front door. McWilliams paid no attention to this, but his wife took the precaution of going to and from school with the little girl, and has done this ever since.

McWilliams said yesterday that he was not worrying particularly, and could only explain the threat by some troubles he has had with former employes.

SYSTEM NOT THIEF PROOF.

Unfinished Banknotes Stolen Despite the Treasury's Precautions.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The Treasury Department's system of printing banknotes, supposed to be automatically thief-proof, has been beaten.

The Bureau of Printing and Engraving turned out $3,000,000,000 in banknotes in 1909 without losing one, but on Jan. 27 a sheet of four ten-dollar gold notes, unnumbered and without the seal disappeared. Four days later the theft was discovered when two of the uncompleted bills turned up at a local bank. The other two returned to the Treasury in the course of business.

The Secret Service men are baffled and no arrests have been made. The system used in handling the bills from the time the ink first touches the paper until they go into circulation has been supposed to be, figuratively, "iron-bound and copper-riveted," and it has been a boast that no theft could occur without detection.

BOY FOILS DYNAMITERS.

Put Out a Smoldering Stick of the Explosive and Saved a House.

An attempt to dynamite the house of Rogiera Rodano late on Wednesday night in Newark, N. J., was foiled by the bravery of a fourteen-year-old boy, Antonio Romano, the son of one of Rodano's tenants. The lad discovered a fuse burning on a window sill of the house, and in stamping it out found a stick of dynamite attached to it, the cover of which was smoldering.

Romano carried the explosive to the street and extinguished it in the snow. He then notified Rodano, who called the police.

Rodano is a wholesale grocer. He had been receiving threatening letters demanding money, and as his only action was to turn them over to the police the attempt at dynamiting is believed to have resulted. Rodano will reward the boy.

WIFE'S WAY IN AMERICA.

Mrs. Brutker, Newly Arrived, Quickly Learns It and Shows George.

George Brutker, a German, who got here with his wife and small child on the Hamburg-American liner Amerika, was rather disconcerted when he found out how rapidly his wife was becoming Americanized. When Mr. Brutker went to the railroad room at Ellis Island to buy tickets he found that 700 marks he had were gone. The money, he thought, had been either lost or stolen on shipboard. Mrs. Brutker came to his help at this embarrassing moment. She produced 300 marks which she had hidden in her clothes and paid for the tickets.

The husband expected the ticket seller to give him the change. Mrs. Brutker would not have it that way. She took the money and carefully put it away again.

"We are in America now," she told her husband. "Here the women hold the purse strings. The men bring their pay home to their wives every pay day, and that is the way we will do."

Then she led her husband away.

Farmer's Friends Put It All Down to His Loss of His Leg.

Henry Camden of Woodhaven, Queens, a retired farmer of 65, who has lost a leg, has just married Miss Dorothy Freeman, a nurse of 35. They are spending their honeymoon in Florida.

Camden first made money by growing celery, and then more by selling his farm in South Woodhaven. For forty years he dodged all attempts to capture him, and his friends believed him to be immune. But two years ago he slipped on an icy pavement and broke a leg. It was found necessary to amputate it, and Camden found life dull for a cripple.

Then he met Miss Freeman, who resided in Ontario, while she was visiting friends in Ozone Park. Camden forgot his principles and fell in love. The nurse was willing, and they were married last week at the home of Mrs. William Clark of Ozone Park, the bridegroom's sister.

WATSON ASSAILS CARNEGIE.

Resents Statement That Negro Is More Advanced Than Were Ancient Scots.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTA, Ga., Feb. 3.—Because Andrew Carnegie recently said, in an address before the Armstrong Association, that "the lowest negro of the South is more advanced than were his (Carnegie's) ancestors in Scotland two hundred years ago," Thomas E. Watson, the Populist leader, to-day denounced the iron master as a "despicable creature," "an ass," and a defamer of the Scotch.

"Everybody knows," said Watson, "how Carnegie got his money, his relations with the controlling powers of this Government, his social equality practices, his dinners to Booker Washington, and his donations to negro colleges. Every intelligent man knows that in saying what he did about the Scotch, he lied, and in blarneying the Afro-Americans he despicably lowered himself; at the same time he insulted—flagrantly—grossly—infamously—every man that has in his veins the blood of old Scotland."

THOUSANDS IN A RIOT OVER A TICKET FAKE

Doors of Grand Central Palace Broken Down and Women and Children Trampled.

GAVE AWAY 100,000 PASSES

Promoter Tried to Collect from Those Who Came and Started a Fight That Blocked Lexington Ave. for an Hour.

Some 17,000 angry men and women stormed the Grand Central Palace in Lexington Avenue, between Forty-third and Forty-fourth Streets, last night, broke through a cordon of guards, smashed the glass doors, and for awhile engaged in a riot which gave Police Capt. Lantry and some one hundred reserves from the four nearby precincts a lively struggle for a time. For more than an hour the surface cars in Lexington Avenue were tied up and the avenue was jammed with excited persons who held tickets for a performance in the Palace, which was already overcrowded.

A dozen or more women fainted in the struggle about the doors and in the lobby of the hall. Many children were dragged away from their mothers, and lost for awhile in the crush. Three women were thrown down and trampled upon, and were dragged unconscious into the manager's room in the hall. The fact that no one was killed is considered remarkable, and had it not been for the good work of the police it is more than likely there would have been many deaths while the rioting was at its height.

It is estimated by the police that 20,000 holders of tickets for the performance at Grand Central Palace were on hand. Less than 2,500 got into the hall, for the doors were ordered closed when the rush was checked and a double row of policemen stood across the front of the building and fought back the crowd.

In the last few days thousands of green tickets, purporting to admit the bearer to seats in the orchestra of the Grand Central Palace for what was advertised as a "Monster Amateur Night Contest and Dance" were distributed through the east side by Herman McCarthy, a son of the late Justice McCarthy.

Each of the seats was marked $2, but they were given away free. Mr. McCarthy, who attended to the arrangements of the "Monster Amateur Night," admitted last night that he distributed 10,000 of the tickets. Marcus Nathan, manager of the Grand Central Palace, says that Mr. McCarthy must be mistaken, for no less than 100,000 tickets were distributed. Most of those who received the tickets were highly elated, for they believed they were going to see a $2 performance of amateurs for nothing. In this they were disappointed, but they did not learn that until later.

Mr. McCarthy had engaged about fifty amateurs who sometimes appear on amateur nights at the burlesque theatres. The evening was to be spent in letting the audience either clap their approval of the amateurs or shout for the "hook." In addition to the green tickets, which were given away, there were a few box seat checks, marked $5, distributed. Some of these are supposed to have been sold, but not many.

The tickets announced that the doors of the hall would be open at 8 o'clock. But at 7 o'clock in the evening the crowd began to gather in front of the doors in Lexington Avenue. Capt. Lantry had heard of the wholesale distribution of tickets, and he anticipated trouble. So he was on hand with a Sergeant and half a dozen policemen. Inside the hall were some twenty guards who had been employed by Mr. McCarthy.

Soon after 7 o'clock the crowd outside had swelled to some 1,000 persons, and the doors were thrown open. Inside crowded the men and women, bearing free tickets. But the guards inside held all who came in the lobby until most of the 1,000 were inside the doors. Then the doors were closed, and Mr. McCarthy and his assistants began trying to collect 50 cents from each of those holding the green coupons. They explained that the 50 cents was for a hat and coat check for the dance, which was to follow the amateur performance.

No sooner did the crowd in the lobby learn of this than a roar of protest went up. Many of the men announced that they would not be buncoed; that they had tickets calling for seats, and they meant to have the seats.

A rush started for the stairway leading from the lobby to the main floor. But this was checked by the McCarthy guards, and the attempt to collect 50 cents from each of the men went on. About 200 of those inside had paid the money demanded, when it was found that the crowd outside was growing alarmingly, and that something would have to be done. Capt. Lantry ordered them to stop collecting, and let the 1,000 in the lobby proceed at once to the main floor. This was done, and the doors were opened again.

About 1,000 more ran into the lobby, swept by the guards, and crowded on into the hall. Again the doors were closed, but the crowd outside had become angry by this time. Those in the rear began pushing those in front. Suddenly one of the plate glass doors went down with a crash, and a moment later another followed. In through the broken doors swept the crowd.

A few minutes before this occurred Capt. Lantry had sent in a call for the reserves, and every man available in four of the nearest station houses hurried around to the Grand Central Palace. They arrived just in time, for the thousands in the street were slowly edging toward the hall, and over the rumble of men's voices and the shouting of the policemen could be heard the screams of women as they were jammed in the crowd. Now and then a child's shrill voice could be heard.

The cars had stopped running long before this. Upon the arrival of the reserves a flying wedge was formed with Sergts. Fogarty, King, and Hollihan at the apex. Through the thickest of the crowd broke this human wedge of policemen, and as the Sergeants reached the door the ends of the wedge pressed outward, driving the crowds back north and south on Lexington Avenue.

Slowly the crowd broke and fell back, and in a little while there was a comparatively clear space in front of the doors. No one was allowed in after that except a few women whose children had been carried inside in the rush.

While the riot was at its height and before the wedge of policemen reached the doors, Manager Nathan and his assistants had dragged several women into his office, where they were restored to consciousness and sent home. It was not until 9 o'clock that Lexington Avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-fifth Streets, was comparatively clear, and the interrupted car service was resumed.

In the excitement McCarthy was running up and down the lobby, wringing his hands and saying, "What am I going to do. There is no money in the house. Oh, what am I going to do?"

No one paid much attention to him, and after a while he calmed down somewhat and told the reporters that it wasn't so bad after all.

"What a big advertisement it will be," he said.

But the manager of the Grand Central Palace could not see where the advertising would be of any benefit to McCarthy, because he would have difficulty in getting a hall for another peformance. As the house was paid for in advance Mc- [illegible] due to lose money.

TAFT WANTS CAUCUS TO PUSH HIS BILLS

One to Consider Subsidies, Postal Banks, Commerce Laws, and House Rules Is Proposed.

INSURGENTS SHOW ALARM

Know They Would Be Far Outnumbered in Such a Gathering, and May Decline to Enter.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The President is taking steps to put through under the party spur legislation on three important items in his programme, according to information circulated at the Capitol late this afternoon. John W. Dwight, Republican whip of the House, began to-day sounding members, and the impression conveyed—although he had not been seen at the White House—was that he had come straight from a conference with the President.

His first suggestion stirred up a great deal of opposition among the insurgents. They explained afterward that what Mr. Dwight indicated that the President wanted was a party caucus at an early date for the consideration of ship subsidy, postal savings banks, inter-State commerce control, and the revision of the House rules. The mention of ship subsidy in a caucus plan, after the insurgents had pointedly omitted it from the statement to the President, giving the list of his policies they intended to support, at once alarmed the insurgents. The mention of rules revision at a caucus where they would be outnumbered 6 to 1 crystallized the feeling.

Ever since the President issued the statement about the harmonious agreement he had brought about between the insurgents and the regulars there has been an increasing murmur against the policy of caucuses to decide all moot points. Many have definite ideas on particular features of the legislative programme, and they shy at the prospect of going to a caucus where the majority of the members may bind them to a modification of their opinions to which they are not willing to submit.

Among some of the insurgents there is on foot a plan for a counter caucus call, in which the caucus will be held strictly to a vote for or against increasing the Committee on Rules, but the more intense of the progressives feel so sure that in the end the regulars will have to come to them pleading for mercy that they are averse to making any moves of their own at this time.

Even on the question of postal savings banks, which is mentioned favorably in both Republican and Democratic platforms, the insurgents are not united. There are at least three of them who will not vote for it on any terms, and it is understood that the regulars are far from solid on the subject. On ship subsidy, the opposition is still stronger, and it can be stated authoritatively that nearly twenty insurgents are against the measure and in no mood to put themselves in a position where they may be bound to support such a bill on the floor. On inter-State commerce legislation there seems to be no particular feeling one way or the other.

As to a caucus on rules—except as referred to in the insurgent counter-caucus call—such a thing is manifestly impossible. The thirty-odd insurgents would be swamped, and to-night they are united in declaring that unless they can get 110 signatures to their specially drafted call—enough to control the caucus—they will not go into one.

Exactly how the tangle will work itself out is not apparent now. No date seems to have been fixed on yet for the caucus call, and it is considered possible that insurgent opposition may assume such proportions that the plan may be later modified.

HASTY VOTE ON SUBSIDIES.

Humphrey Bill Rushed Out by House Committee After a Row.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—One of the so-called secondary measures in the President's legislative programme was started on its way to-day, when the House Committee on Merchant Marine and Fisheries ordered a favorable report on the Administration's Ship Subsidy bill, introduced by Mr. Humphrey of Washington. Mr. Humphrey will in a week or ten days complete his report on the measure, and it will then be put on the calendar in the House.

The principal provisions are that payments for ocean mail service under the act of March 3, 1891, shall be made to vessels of the second class at the rate now applicable to vessels of the first class; that ships shall not benefit which are owned, controlled, or favored by any railroad; that the tonnage tax be increased to 12 cents; that registry shall be denied to foreign-built vessels except steel steamers of 2,500 gross tons or more, and that foreign-built vessels, when registered, shall not be entitled to mail compensation under the act of 1891.

The session of the committee this morning was a stormy one. In addition to a personal altercation between Mr. Humphrey and James M. Dougherty, representing the Merchants' Association of New York, in which each attacked the other's sincerity, there were half a dozen tiffs between the members, and the cry was set up not only by the Democrats but by several of the Republicans, that the sudden demand by Mr. Humphrey for a vote was an effort to "railroad" the bill through the committee without giving time for full discussion.

In the vote in committee on the Humphrey bill the Democrats stood solidly against it, and were joined in their opposition by two Republicans, Mr. Swazey of Maine and Mr. Wilson of Illinois, both regulars. The vote was 10 to 7.

How the measure will fare in the House can only be conjectured. There are a few members of the minority who are in favor of it. The insurgents will act individually.

POSTAL BANK BILL CHANGED.

New Provision to Protect the Depository Banks from Withdrawals.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Senator Smoot's amendment to the Postal Savings Bank bill prohibiting the withdrawal for investment of postal funds from banks in which they might be deposited so long as the banks were willing to pay 2¼ per cent. interest was agreed to by the Senate to-day. The discussion brought out the fact that it was not the purpose to convert the proposed savings system into a money-making concern for the Government, and the effect of the amendment is to prevent an interest charge greater than is reasonably sufficient to meet the expenses and the interest charges of the system.

The bill was under discussion for about two hours. Mr. Heyburn declared it to be "reckless and careless." Asserting that a vast majority of the National banks did not pay interest on deposits, he declared that the effect of the enactment of the proposed law would be to concentrate the great bulk of the postal funds in the New York banks which loaned their money on call. "There's the Senegambian," he exclaimed.

Mr. Carter failed in an effort to obtain an agreement for a vote on the bill next Thursday.

TESTS OF PAPER MAKING.

House Provides Money for an Inquiry Into the Methods.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Tests of the methods of papermaking are provided for by an appropriation made by the House to-day.

They will be conducted by the Bureau of Forestry in co-operation with the Newspaper Publishers' Association.

TAX LAW SATISFIES TAFT.

Does Not Think Corporations Will Suffer Through Giving Information.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—President Taft to-day announced that he did not consider an amendment to the corporation tax law necessary in order to prevent rival concerns from obtaining information as to the private affairs of competitors.

This statement was called out by a visit from S. C. Mead, Secretary of the Merchants' Association of New York, who asked that the publicity feature of the law be eliminated. Mr. Mead alleged that many manufacturers thought their business would be harmed by the exposure of their private affairs to competitors, but President Taft said that the law did not contemplate this. He added that it was necessary for the Government to have access to the books of the various corporations, but that the information thus gained would be treated as confidential.

He thought sufficient protection could be given to manufacturers by a discreet administration of the law, and he said he would take this matter up with Attorney General Wickersham and Secretary of the Treasury MacVeagh.

HILLES MAY BE SURVEYOR.

But Tells President He Prefers His Present Office to Clarkson's.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Charles D. Hilles, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury, who has been urged upon the President as successor to Gen. Clarkson as Surveyor of the Port of New York, had an extended talk to-day with President Taft.

Mr. Hilles, it is understood, told the President that he appreciated the representations that had been made in his behalf, but preferred to remain in his present place, in which he was deeply interested.

The matter is still unsettled, however, and it is said Mr. Hilles may be prevailed upon to take the place. The President has said that he was anxious to get a young man for Surveyor to hold up the hands of Collector Loeb and to assist him energetically in the work he has undertaken.

STRANGE DEATH OF COUPLE.

May Be Due to Murder, Suicide, or Natural Causes.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 3.—What might have been a double murder, a suicide agreement, or two sudden deaths from natural causes, was discovered to-day when the bodies of William Bohrer, a prosperous lapidary, aged 55, and an unidentified woman about 30 years of age, were found in a room in the wholesale jewelry trade section of this city where they had lain probably for more than a month. The room in which the bodies were found was used by Bohrer as a sleeping apartment and adjoined his shop on the third floor of a small building at Seventh and Sansom Streets.

The lapidary, who had succeeded his father in business many years ago, had not been seen since Christmas week. It was his custom to take frequent fishing and hunting trips, and the fact that his rooms had not been opened for more than a month attracted little attention. His son, after several attempts to find his father at home, to-day notified the police and the door was broken open.

The bodies of the man and woman were found lying in the room. Bohrer's body was stretched face downward across a chair, while that of the woman lay on the bed, also face downward, her outstretched hand grasping the round of a chair.

There was nothing to indicate that the couple had entered a suicide agreement, no trace of poison having been found. Neither was there any evidence of murder, aside from the fact that Bohrer's body was lying in an unusual position. The apartment was in good order and there was no evidence of a robbery having been committed.

SWOPE FEARED DEATH.

Quit Drinking and Told Partner of Uncle Who Did So and Died.

KANSAS CITY, Feb. 3.—After a day of legal warfare in the Swope case Judge Brumbach of the Circuit Court to-day enjoined attorneys representing Dr. B. C. Hyde and the persons against whom he has pending a damage suit for $600,000 from taking further depositions in the suits until the court has determined the legal status of all the persons concerned. Attorneys for both sides claim the right of priority in taking depositions.

Facts not hitherto generally known regarding the life and habits of the late Col. Swope were brought out when the deposition of S. W. Spangler, an office partner of the millionaire, was taken by Mr. Walsh. Mr. Spangler told of the visits of an unidentified woman to the office and how she brought broth for Col. Swope to eat. He refused to eat it.

"A short time before his death Col. Swope told me he did not believe he had long to live," said Mr. Spangler. "It was soon after he had quit drinking. He said he did not expect to live more than ninety days. I pressed him for a reason for his belief. He said an uncle of his drank for many years, and when he quit his death followed soon.

"He didn't have much confidence in the average physician, nor did he have much confidence in the curative qualities of any medicine, although he took considerable of it. When he took a certain medicine which contained elixir of iron, quinine, and strychnine he usually took a teaspoonful three times a day."

Testing Rockaway Beach Rights.

The United States Government has begun an equity suit in the United States Circuit Court in Brooklyn to protect its rights to that part of Rockaway Beach which includes the life-saving station and the Hatch and Harriman tracts. The Neponsit Realty Company had already started a suit in the Queens County Municipal Court to oust two members of the Government's life-saving corps from [illegible] to the Rockaway Beach tract was questioned in the [illegible] of the McClellan administration, when a plan to have the city buy it for an ocean park was desired.

ELKINS TURNS REBEL OVER TARIFF PRICES

Accuses Aldrich and Lodge of Opposing an Inquiry Into Effect of High Duties.

ONCE AFRAID OF ALDRICH

And Aldrich Knew the Reason—Now He Declares He Will Really Be an Independent.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Senator Elkins of West Virginia again went off the reservation to-day, and in the open Senate declared forcibly to Senator Aldrich and the other members of the Finance Committee that he was "in slavery no longer." In making his declaration of independence Mr. Elkins confessed to having kept in line throughout the tariff struggle simply because he had to do so, but now he said he was more free and would move about as he pleased.

The whole discussion, in which Mr. Aldrich and Senator Lodge and others took part, arose when the Finance Committee reported favorably Mr. Lodge's resolution ordering an investigation by a select committee of five into the high prices of food.

Though referring to the same subject as his own resolution, Mr. Elkins declared that the Lodge resolution and the Finance Committee that sponsored it were trying to avoid the issue. His resolution set forth specifically that the investigation should consider the effect of trusts and tariff on prices, while the Lodge resolution in general and vaguer terms referred merely to "all causes." In the face of a point-blank denial from Mr. Lodge, he reiterated his assertion that the committee was alarmed at the prospect of revelations as to the effect of the tariff.

"I expected the Senator from Massachusetts," said Mr. Elkins, "to deny that he was trying to avoid the tariff issue, but the whole press of the country says that he is trying to avoid it."

"And which does the Senator believe," he was asked, "the statement of the Senator from Massachusetts or the statements in the press?"

"On that point," replied Mr. Elkins, while his colleagues laughed, "I will suspend judgment until developments make it clear."

In reply to suggestions from the regulars that he refrain from opposition now and wait to offer amendments to the resolution when it came up in the regular course, Mr. Elkins replied that he would have adopted that course if he had ever been able through those means to extract anything from the Committee on Finance.

"I never got anything from that committee in my life," he exclaimed, "except such drippings as were thrown out to me in the tariff struggle for articles produced in my State. And for the sake of those drippings I had to vote for everything the committee recommended. There is nothing in the committee's resolution about the trusts and the tariff, yet those are subjects that ought to be thoroughly investigated. The committee should get the facts and send them to the country. The Republican Party ought not to try to dodge the issue."

Mr. Elkins said that in offering his resolution authorizing the appointment of a select committee he had expected to take part himself in the investigation and that he had definite ideas on that subject. Now, he said, he did not expect to get on the investigating committee, but he did think the investigation should be conducted in a way to show that the party was not afraid of the facts.

Mr. Bailey here interposed that if Mr. Elkins would only show that he meant to become a good insurgent, now that he was evidently tired of marching in the ranks of the "anarchists," his demands would be listened to with more respect. The reference was to Mr. Elkins's speech criticising Mr. Aldrich for ignoring the Southern States in the composition of the committee that secretly devised the tariff rates. After that speech Mr. Elkins had consistently voted with the committee.

"I couldn't get off the reservation in the tariff struggle," he said, grinning, "because I was afraid to. And the Senator from Rhode Island knows why I was afraid. But now I have a little more sea room. I am not now in slavery. I kept in the procession last year, but I don't have to do that all the time. Heretofore in times of trouble I have always gone to the Senator from Rhode Island, whom I greatly admire, though his leadership is sometimes terrific when it crushes me up, and he has either set me straight or told me, 'You better stand right where you are if you know what is good for you.'"

Mr. Aldrich, who was sitting beside Mr. Elkins through this debate, shook with laughter at the references to himself and his power over the Senate. He declared at one point that he had no desire to dodge any inquiry or protect any interests.

After the colloquy Mr. Elkins said that he had meant everything he said about his course in the future, and that on the whole legislative programme before the Senate he intended to be guided by his own judgment. He seemed quite nervous over the plunge he had taken, though he reiterated his determination to pursue an independent course. Exactly how this determination will affect his position in regard to the pending Administration bills he did not say. On the matter of postal savings banks, toward which much opposition developed in the debate to-day, he said he had no doubt of its passage. He seemed to think the other Administration measures scheduled for passage before the session would have the same safe road.

Self-Possessed Kathleen Enjoyed Traveling Around the World.

Miss Kathleen Robinson, holding fast to a flaxen-haired doll, came down the gangplank of the White Star liner Adriatic yesterday afternoon, a self-possessed young person, who extended her hand to a pretty young woman who was waiting, remarking:

"You are Aunt Kathleen. I can tell by your picture."

Miss Kathleen is 6 years old. She has blue-gray eyes, a pleasant smile, and a wealth of taffy-colored hair, and she has come alone all the way from Singapore to live with her aunt, Miss Kathleen Warren of 311 West Ninety-fourth Street. The child's mother is Dr. Mary Robinson, who manages a sanitarium in Singapore. Her father was an English merchant in the Far East, who died there two years ago. Kathleen was born there, and this is her first visit to America. She has a seventeen-year-old sister, and two brothers.

Many months ago the child was sent to England to school. She lived with relatives for a while, and then her mother decided that it would be best for her to come back to Singapore. So the child made the trip, journeying out alone in a P. & O. steamer.

Miss Warren said that the climate of Singapore did not agree with the child. The mother thought that it would be best for her to come out to Aunt Kathleen. So little Kathleen was started on her second long journey alone. She embarked on the steamer Macedonia at Colombo on Nov. 29. She arrived in London, where friends met her and escorted her to Southampton. There she was booked as a first-cabin passenger on the Adriatic and put in charge of a stewardess. On the voyage she won many friends, and when she landed yesterday they flocked about her to bid her good-bye and tell her aunt what a good traveler she was.

Little Miss Kathleen confided to her aunt that she had been kept remarkably busy on the voyage. Lillie, the doll, who is now two months old, had not stood the trip well, and little Kathleen had to spend much time in caring for her.

"Lillie is such a care, Aunt Kathleen," she told her aunt, as she hugged the doll close. "But," she added, "she's better now."

The little girl had never seen her aunt, so when she left home the mother gave her a photograph of Miss Warren. While the Adriatic was slowly slipping alongside her pier Miss Kathleen spied her aunt among the waiting crowd. She picked her out by her likeness to the photograph.

"There's auntie now," she said, excitedly to the stewardess, who was holding her up to the rail so that she could get a good view. And so it was.

Little Kathleen made her customs declaration just like her fellow-passengers. Unlike them, however, she did not make it until she landed on the pier. Her aunt assisted in this. When Deputy Surveyor Conrow held the mite up to sign the paper he thought she would make a childish scribble which the aunt could attest. Instead, little Kathleen took off one red mitten and signed her name in a very readable hand. At which Conrow was so lost in admiration that he dropped the paper, and the aunt, in delight, hugged the little traveler, exclaiming:

"Isn't she a little dear?"

The little girl will remain at her aunt's house for some time, after which she will enter a convent school.

"I wasn't a bit afraid," said Miss Kathleen, "and I've had a fine time."

WRECKED BY CARBOLIC ACID.

Explosion Blows Out the Rear of Brooklyn Drug Store.

Moses Vannowick, proprietor of a drug store on the ground floor of a three-story apartment building at 529 Greenwood Avenue, in the Flatbush section of Brooklyn, went into the back yard last night at 10:30 o'clock, meaning to get some drugs from a little storehouse at the rear.

While he was in the small house Mr. Vannowick heard a loud explosion. Running out, he saw the whole back end of his store blown out. The families of Taylor Conlon, who occupies the second floor, and that of Walter Omerston, the owner of the building, who occupies the top floor, ran to the street.

The police reserves of the Parkville Station and the firemen were summoned. No one was hurt. It was concluded that the $2,000 damage had been caused by the explosion of a five-pound can of carbolic acid which was under the prescription counter.

R. T. WILSON'S STABLE SAFE.

He Gets an Injunction Against Building a Garage Near It.

Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, father of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, obtained an injunction yesterday from Justice Gerard against C. H. Lang & Co. and the Thomas Flyer Renting Agency, to prevent encroachments on the alley behind his residence, 511 Fifth Avenue. The injunction requires the removal of a portion of a garage jutting into the alley, and the refilling of a trench dug to carry gasoline and refuse water to Forty-third Street. It also bars motor vehicles from the alley.

Mr. Wilson said the garage and trench interfered with access to his stable, and that motor cars would render the alley unfit for horse-drawn vehicles. He submitted evidence of an agreement that the alley was to be kept open forever. He has lived for thirty years at 511 Fifth Avenue.

OCEAN CARD SHARPS MOVE.

They Are Finding Rich Pickings on South American Liners Now.

Capt. C. F. Laws of the Royal Mail steam packet Ortona, which arrived here yesterday on her maiden voyage from Southampton via the West Indies, said that the American card sharpers who formerly practiced on the Atlantic liners had turned their attention to the South American liners, on which there were easy victims with plenty of money. Although the sharpers do not speak Spanish that is no serious obstacle to their gambling, the Captain said, as Argentine bankers, merchants, and stock brokers can all speak English and spend their money freely.

TWO SHOT PLAYING ROBBER.

Boy Wounds Himself and Companion, Who Is Likely to Died.

Playing "highwayman" with a loaded revolver resulted last night in Brooklyn in the wounding of two boys, one of them mortally, it is feared. The same shot injured both boys, the bullet passing through the hand of one and striking the other in the stomach.

The boys were Joseph Casamassa, 7 years old, of 595 Carroll Street, and Raffaelo Debarle, 10 years old, of 591 Carroll Street. With other boys, they were playing in the hallway of the home of the Casamassa boy. Young Debarle had in his hand a revolver, which, he later told the police, he had bought from another boy in the street for 5 cents. With this deadly plaything, the Debarle boy made believe he was a highwayman.

"Hold up your hands," he commanded, addressing Joseph.

With a laugh Joseph obeyed.

Young Debarle said afterward that he didn't know the pistol was loaded. Anyhow, he pointed it at Joseph, holding his own left hand over the muzzle of the weapon, and then pulled the trigger. At the report which followed, both lads fell to the floor, crying out in pain. The bullet had passed through the palm of Debarle's left hand and lodged in the Casamassa boy's stomach.

Ambulance Surgeon McCord took the Casamassa boy to the Seney Hospital, where it was said later that he would probably die. After young Debarle's hand had been dressed, he was turned over to the Children's Society. Although the police say he admitted doing the shooting, they could not find the revolver in the hallway. They believe that some one hid the pistol before the police arrived.

Only One Call by Fifth Avenue Church

Charles Wheeler Barnes, Chairman of the General Committee on the Selection of a Pastor for the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, issued a statement last night, saying that the church had only extended one call. That was to the Rev. J. H. Jowett of Birmingham, England, who declined it. Mr. Barnes in issuing the statement denied the rumor published on both sides of the Atlantic that two distinguished English clergymen had declined the call.

WARRINER EXPLAINS THEFT OF $643,000

Big Four's Treasury Looted for Years by Cooke, Comstock, and Himself, He Says.

EASY TO UNCOVER THEFTS

Auditor Could Have Done So at Any Time, He Asserts—Cooke's Letters to Mrs. Ford.

CINCINNATI, Feb. 3.—A chain of embezzlements involving three men, extending over many years and finally culminating in the almost wholesale looting of the Big Four Railroad treasury, was told of by Charles L. Warriner, defaulting local treasurer of the road in his testimony to-day in the trial of Mrs. Jeanette Stewart Ford for blackmail.

According to the witness, when he assumed office as local treasurer in 1902 he learned that Cooke was short in his accounts $24,000. He also learned that his predecessor, Comstock, was short $10,500. He himself was a defaulter, and to prevent his crime from being discovered, he said, he assumed the shortages of the two former officials and engaged to conceal them.

A ruling by Judge Swing that all the testimony regarding Warriner's defalcation is relevant in the trial of Mrs. Ford opened the way for a detailed sworn statement from Warriner as to the amounts he had taken and what he had done with them.

"What was the system you pursued in taking all this money?" asked Attorney Thorndyke for the defense.

"I took the money from the daily remittances of the station agents," Warriner replied. "These varied, but sometimes ran as high as $200,000 or $300,000 a day. It was only necessary for me to make the credit less than the amount received."

He testified that his salary was $5,000 a year.

Attorney Thorndyke brought out that the Auditor of the road had duplicates of the station agents' remittance slips with which to check Warriner's accounts. He asked Warriner how it happened that the shortage had not been discovered. The witness replied:

"That's for him to explain."

"Was there some understanding between you and the Auditor?"

"There was not; he did not know of my shortage."

"Who was the Auditor of the Big Four?"

"P. A. Hewitt."

"If he had compared the remittance slips with the general ledger he would have found you out in a moment, would he not?"

"Yes."

"Did you change the remittance slips?"

"No, I just changed the total credits."

How the Exposure Came.

When the inquiry turned to Warriner's exposure he said:

"When the matter was reported to the Big Four and I was confronted with the facts, I made a full and free confession. Mrs. Ford's connection with the case was part of that confession."

"Did you attribute your exposure to her?"

"I was led to believe from circumstances and what I saw in the newspapers that she had been the indirect cause of it. She had told me shortly before that she and Ida Brockway had fallen out, and that she feared Ida Brockway would tell all about the matter. When the exposure come it was stated that Frank Couden was the agent who took the information to the Big Four officials. He was an intimate friend of Ida Brockway, and I put two and two together and attributed the exposure to the circumstances of Mrs. Ford and Ida Brockway falling out."

"Now is it not a fact that you were promised immunity if you would expose Mrs. Ford's connection with Cooke and this case?"

"I was not promised immunity."

"Isn't it true, or do you know, that after you were sentenced to six years in the penitentiary the County Prosecutor tried to have your sentence reduced to four years?"

"It is not true. I never heard of it."

Warriner testified that Cooke's method of abstracting money was the same as his own, but that Comstock used a different system, abstracting from the cash receipts, but they all posted the totals incorrectly.

All through the examination the State interposed objections. Judge Swing overruled them as fast as they were made, giving the widest possible scope to the investigation.

A curious light was thrown on the strange tale when the letters of Cooke to Mrs. Ford were read to the court. In one letter Cooke wrote that "O. H." was threatening to expose him if he did not abandon Mrs. Ford. Warriner stated that "O. H." stood for "Old Hag," and was the name Cooke used for his wife in his communications to Mrs. Ford. In another letter Cooke advised Mrs. Ford to have nothing to do with other men.

Several letters were read in which Comstock was mentioned, one from Cooke saying that he did not care "if the whole thing busts up; then Comstock will get his."

Loses Faith in Cooke.

Warriner aroused some interest by declaring that the letters introduced at the trial had been a revelation to him. He asserted that he is now convinced that Cooke and Mrs. Ford were in a conspiracy to get money from him, whereas he formerly believed that the woman's infatuation for Cooke was the sole cause of the relations between them.

The Judge would permit the reading of only excerpts of the letters on account of the expressions with which they abounded. During the reading of the letters Mrs. Ford endeavored to conceal her face and wept.

In the story of the gigantic theft there is one question which has never been definitely answered. The attorneys for the defense to-day made another futile effort to obtain its solution. What became of the $643,000 which Warriner has confessed was stolen? The witness declared that he had paid approximately $168,000 in blackmail, and that $32,000 had been stolen by others than himself. The remainder of $443,000 is said by him to have been lost in speculation.

Although he knew exactly the amount embezzled and the approximate amount of "hush money" paid, to all questions as to his investments he replied that he could not remember how much money he had put in any particular enterprise. He reiterated monotonously that he "could not recollect" until his questioners became discouraged and abandoned their efforts.

Denial Made by Comstock.

Frank Comstock, who was succeeded by Warriner as local Treasurer of the Big Four Railway, this afternoon declared that it was not true that he was short $10,500 when he left the road's employment.

"I was not short $10,500, or any other amount," he said.

P. A. Hewitt, who, Warriner testified, was Auditor of the Big Four during the latter's defalcations, declined to discuss Warriner's statements that the shortage might easily have been discovered. It was learned to-day that Mr. Hewitt's connection with the railway ended Feb. 1. It is reported here that he is to become Auditor of the New York Central clearing house at Buffalo.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—"We never received a dollar from Charles L. Warriner," said Edgar S. Cooke here to-day. "He told an untruth.

"I believe Warriner must have been out of his mind when he said that I had received more than $100,000 from him not to expose his shortage. I never knew that Warriner was short until I read about it in the newspapers. My record is clean. I was Chief Clerk under Warriner, and my books show that I do not owe the Big Four Railroad a dollar."

Mrs. Cooke also denied that either she or her husband received any money from Warriner.

GETS OUT OF SACKVILLE CASE.

Counsel Withdraws and Claimant Will Plead His Own Case.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Sir Edward Clarke, counsel for Ernest Henry Sackville-West in the latter's suit to establish that he is the legitimate son and heir of the late Lionel Sackville Sackville-West, Lord Sackville, withdrew abruptly from the case to-day following a disagreement with his client as to his procedure. Several depositions denying the reputed marriage of the late Lord Sackville and Josefa Duran had been read, when Sir Edward arose and announced his retirement in consequence of a letter which had just been handed him by his client, and in which he was instructed to request the court for an adjournment pending the production of important documents from Spain. The letter, which the barrister proceeded to read aloud, concluded:

"Should Sir John Bigham refuse, I wish you to retire from the case, as I do not care to go on further with such an unfair trial."

Sir Edward explained that he was not prepared to apply for an adjournment, as he could not say that the Spanish documents referred to were material to his case. Accordingly, he would withdraw. The petitioner's junior counsel followed suit, and President Bigham suspended the sitting for one hour to allow the claimant opportunity to consider the situation.

The action is defended by the present Lord Sackville, a nephew of the former British Minister to the United States. Among the depositions offered when court opened was a statement by the diplomat, in which he had said: "When my daughters stayed in Washington they passed as my legitimate children, but everybody knew that they were illegitimate." It was at the conclusion of the reading of this deposition that Sir Edward announced his withdrawal.

In the course of the hearing of the case the evidence of Mrs. Cameron, Gen. Sherman's daughter, was read. She testified that she had heard the question of the legitimacy of Sackville-West's daughters discussed in the presence of President Garfield's wife, and it was agreed by the American ladies, who decided these matters, that the daughters were to be "received" in Washington society.

When court reconvened the petitioner announced that he desired to plead his own case, adding: "I know that I shall lose, but I will have a good try." Thereupon adjournment until to-morrow was taken.

THE PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

Schumann, Strauss, and Wagner at the Sixth Concert—Miss Koenen Soloist.

The Philharmonic Society gave the sixth of its evening concerts in its regular series last evening. The programme began with Schumann's D minor symphony, which Mr. Mahler had played before. The last movement he takes at a tempo that robs it of some of its effect; but there is much that is striking and finely characteristic in Mr. Mahler's reading. Richard Strauss's tone poem "Don Juan" and Wagner's overture to "Tannhäuser" were the other orchestral numbers.

The performance of Strauss's "Don Juan" was an extraordinarily fine one. Mr. Mahler entered into the dramatic and illustrative spirit of the work with a very clear appreciation of its purport, and this he reproduced in the orchestra's playing with much freedom and eloquence. The orchestra's playing was a brilliant achievement; and after he had been several times recalled at the close of it, Mr. Mahler made the members of the orchestra rise and share the applause themselves. It is remarkable how fine, how spirited, how genial this work of Strauss's younger years sounds to-day—and how clear and intelligible. It makes the music of "Elektra" seem dull and degenerate. The handicraft and complexity of this latter seem toilsome and old already; it smells of the lamp, (or worse;) while "Don Juan" has a youthful buoyancy and propulsive force that delight after the twenty years that have elapsed since he wrote it.

Miss Tilly Koenen was the soloist. She sang Beethoven's dramatic Scena and Aria, "Ah, Perfido," and three songs with orchestral accompaniment: Strauss's "Hymnus," Max Fiedler's "Die Musikantin," and Hugo Wolf's "Er Ist's." The orchestral accompaniment of the last is arranged from the original pianoforte version. Miss Koenen's rich and powerful controlto was heard to the best advantage in these modern songs. Her style had hardly the finish and repose that are needed for Beethoven's air.

There was considerably less interest in the performance of the "Tannhäuser" overture than in the other numbers of the programme.

MME. GILLY SAILS FOR PARIS.

Baritone's Wife to Join Her Children, Spared from Flood.

Mme. Gilly, wife of Dinh Gilly, the principal French baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company, sailed yesterday on La Bretagne. She had intended to remain here until the end of the season, but her two children are in Paris and the news of the flood has filled her with alarm. Several days elapsed after the flood started before she could get word of her children. Reassurance finally came by cable that the children were safe, but that the house of the Gillys in Colombes was practically submerged. This was last Sunday, and it was thought advisable that Mme. Gilly return at once.

Mme. Gilly came here with her husband with no intention of singing, but when "La Fille de Mme. Angot" was produced there was no one to sing Amaranthe in the company. Mme. Gilly had never appeared on the stage, but she was a conservatoire pupil, and it was suggested that she try the rôle. She essayed it with complete success.

Later she had a hearing in the Opera House, and has been engaged to sing mezzo soprano rôles there next season in French, German, and Italian. Dinh Gilly is engaged for two more seasons here also.

SHIBLEY CRIES OUT AT COURT'S RULING

Father of Murdered Boy Denounces Refusal to Hold Insane Suspect for the Crime.

COMMITTED FOR ASSAULT

Fredericks Identifies Dennison as the Man Who Shot Him—Grand Jury to Consider Murder Charge.

When Magistrate Corrigan announced yesterday afternoon, after a hearing in the Criminal Court Building, that he didn't think the police had produced enough evidence to warrant him in holding Herbert Jerome Dennison on the charge of murdering Arthur Shibley and Robert Lomas, the two 6-year-old boys who were shot in Highbridge Park on Jan. 12, Ameen Shibley, the father of the Syrian boy, jumped up and, beating on his breast, shouted:

"That's the man that killed my boy, and now they are turning him loose. The Judge is playing politics. I know that's the man."

"Stop that noise back there," commanded Magistrate Corrigan.

Shibley and his brother were put out of the courtroom by Inspector McCafferty and a squad of detectives. They took with them Robert Lomas, the father of the Lomas boy, who was seen running his hand to his hip pocket. Both fathers were searched by the police, but no weapons were found on them.

Though Magistrate Corrigan discharged Dennison on the murder charge, he held him for examination on the charge of feloniously assulting John Fredericks of 817 Gerard Avenue, the Bronx, on the night of Jan. 8. District Attorney Whitman said he thought there was enough evidence already at hand against the man on the murder charge and that he would present that also to the Grand Jury.

Mr. Whitman arrived at that decision only after hearing the new evidence offered yesterday. One of the new witnesses was Dr. Frederick Ruland, who has a private asylum in Westport, Conn. He said that Dennison was in his institution from April to September last year; that he had considered the young man incurable; that he was suffering from dementia praecox, a form of paranoia; that he had often threatened to kill people, and that he seemed to have a bitter grudge against William C. Whitney, whom he often said he would kill, and others.

No real effort was made to treat the patient, said Dr. Ruland, beyond trying hypnotism. Mrs. Catherine Dennison, the young man's mother, insisted that she be allowed to take him out walking whenever she desired, the doctor said, and after a while complaints came in that the madman had fired a revolver while the two were on their walks.

Dr. Ruland had admonished the mother about that, he said, whereupon she had declared that she kept the pistol in a tin box at her boarding house and never let her son have it except when she was with him. Dr. Ruland then insisted that the young man be taken away from his institution. He left after about a month.

James McCormick of Westport testified that several times he had seen a young man resembling Dennison and his mother walking in the woods back of the reservoir at Westport, and that he had noticed the young man shooting with a pistol, sometimes with one hand and then with the other. The woman sat on a bank near at hand and watched him, said McCormick. He thought the defendant was the man he had seen. He positively identified Mrs. Dennison as the woman.

"I shot at targets some of the time," the prisoner declared.

John Fredericks was also a witness.

"I had been calling on my sweetheart," he said. "I was on my way home. I know it was about 11:15 o'clock, because I left when her sister came in from work at 11 o'clock Saturday night, Jan. 8. While crossing the 153d Street bridge over the Harlem River I saw a man standing under an arc light.

"When I came near him he turned his back on me. That made me suspicious, and so when I heard him turn to follow me the moment I got by him I faced him. I saw a pistol, and then he shot me in the right arm. I turned to run, and he shot me three times more."

"Now, consider what your words mean to this unfortunate young man," cautioned Abraham Levy, representing Dennison, "and say if you can swear that it was he who shot you that night."

"I can swear it," replied Fredericks. "I could not be mistaken. We were both under the arc light, and I got a good look at him."

Inspector McCafferty was put on the stand to review the whole case. Fredericks's sweetheart testified as to the time he left the house. Without calling any witnesses for the defense, Mr. Levy said there wasn't enough evidence to hold Dennison on the murder charge, but that he thought there was a perfect case on the Fredericks charge.

District Attorney Whitman gave notice that if Magistrate Corrigan discharged Dennison on the murder charge he would nevertheless take the case to the Grand Jury.

TRADE PEACE WON FROM THE GERMANS

Our Minimum Tariff Exchanged for Their Minimum in Arrangement Practically Accepted.

CATTLE QUESTION RESERVED

No Interruption in $500,000,000 Trade on Account of Exchange of Old Agreement for One More Liberal.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—Count von Bernstorff, German Ambassador to the United States, announced this evening at a banquet given him at the New Willard by the Germania Club that three months of arduous and delicate negotiations had ended happily, and that there would be no trade war between the German empire and the United States. The Government bill giving the United States the German conventional tariff in return for our minimum, said the Ambassador, to-day passed the German Bundesrath, and he hoped that to-morrow it would pass the eRichstag.

Earlier in the day the State Department gave out a statement on the subject, expressing great satisfaction at the conclusion of the negotiations. The friendliness of the German Government, said the statement, was largely responsible for the happy outcome of negotiations, and no fear was expressed for the ultimate passage of the measure started on its way to-day.

The Government's Statement.

In the statement issued at the State Department to-day details of the final agreement are given as follows:

"A satisfactory settlement of the tariff negotiations with Germany, which have been going on for some months under the President's direction, has been reached. By the understanding arrived at there will be no tariff war and no interruption of the enormous commerce passing between the two countries. The magnitude of this business appears from the statement that in the calendar year just closed, the direct interchange of commodities between Germany and the United States exceeded $409,000,000, and allowance being made for the German importations through other countries the actual volume is probably in excess of $500,000,000.

"The products of the United States will be assured the fullest opportunity to participate in the constantly growing business of the German Empire. This will be done on a complete equality with the competing products of other countries.

"By the terms of the commercial agreement which has been in force since 1907 Germany extended to the United States her conventional or lowest rates on about 100 out of nearly 1,000 tariff numbers. These 100 numbers covered a large percentage in value of the actual imports from the United States, but nevertheless left the many important commodities of American manufacture at a disadvantage in competition with similar products from other countries.

"This agreement expires Feb. 7. It was the earnest desire of the German Government to reach a solution of the questions at issue, so that the necessary legislation might be enacted to prevent any disturbance of existing commercial relations. The President fully reciprocated this sentiment.

"In consequence of the friendly disposition of both Governments, an agreement has been reached under which it will be possible for the German Government, with the co-operation of the Imperial Parliament, to avoid any interruption of trade, and at the same time to extend to the United States not only the rates at present enjoyed, but the entire remaining schedules of minimum rates now accorded other countries.

Minimum for Minimum.

"The basis of the settlement is that Germany grants to the United States her full conventional tariff rates in return for the minimum tariff of the United States. This is an exchange of minimum for minimum. It places the United States on exactly the same terms as all other countries to which Germany grants conventional rates under her various commercial conventions or most-favored-nation treaties.

"In the President's opinion the responsibilities devolved on him by the Payne-Aldrich act require from all countries a grant to the United States of substantially their lowest tariff rates. It is a source of much gratification to the President that Germany finds it possible to extend to the United States her complete minimum schedules without reservation or qualification.

"The volume of business passing directly between the two countries is now $409,000,000 annually. It has grown to this amount from $251,000,000 in 1899."

The statement goes on to say that the solution reached was in a large measure due to the friendly and conciliatory spirit of the German Government. Both sides recognized that while in the variety and complexity of modern commercial conditions some points of divergence between two great commercial nations would be encountered, their nature was not such as to preclude an agreement which would be beneficial in the mutual markets.

"In return for the concession of her full conventional or lowest rates Germany will be accorded the minimum tariff of the United States," the statement continues. "This puts Germany in the position of the most favored nation in her tariff relations with the United States. The maximum tariff of the United States, which as the basic tariff would otherwise apply after March 31, will, therefore, not go into effect, the minimum being granted in return for Germany's full minimum rates. The result is to give to Germany the same assurance under the United States tariff law that she has secured by her treaties with other countries.

Some Questions Settled.

"In reaching a settlement some questions which had arisen regarding the administrative features of the Payne-Aldrich law and some misconceptions as to a possible unfavorable treatment of German imports into the United States have been dispelled to the satisfaction of the German Government. A collateral matter relating to the interpretation and application of the Pure Food law has also been explained satisfactorily."

TARIFF BILL IN REICHSTAG.

Kaiser's Government Expects It to be Passed To-morrow.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—The measure for the ratification of the German-American tariff agreement was laid before the Reichstag this afternoon after passing the Federal Council. It is very brief, containing no details, and does not state the scope of the concessions which Germany makes. The principal paragraph reads:

"The Bundesrath is authorized to admit to a reasonable extent the import of the products of the United States to German customs territory at the tariff rates of the existing commercial treaties. This authorization will remain in force so long as the United States does not subject the products of the German Empire and those countries and territories united with it in customs relations to higher duties than are contained in Section I. of the American tariff law of Aug. 5, 1909."

The bill further sets forth the conditions under which the Bundesrath may wholly or in part withdraw from the United States the advantages accorded to American products. The first condition is in the event that the United States in administering its custom regulations should fail to treat German goods in accordance with the principles contained in the note to Article 2 of the tariff agreement of April 22 and May 2, 1907. A second condition would arise if the United States through legislation adopted or by treaties with a third country or otherwise should introduce changes affecting the exchange of goods between the German Empire and the United States to the disadvantage of Germany.

Negotiations Still in Progress.

The report accompanying the Tariff bill states that negotiations are still in progress in reference to the German-American tariff agreement, but it seemed best to empower the Bundesrath in the manner stated, since this would make it possible to continue giving to the United States the existing rates after Feb. 7, and then in subsequent negotiations to concede so much of the German conventional tariff as might be necessary to reach an agreement. The report mentions three demands made by the United States.

The first is for the entire conventional tariff or reasonable compensations therefore by specific reductions below the treaty rates.

The second demand is for the admission of American pork to Germany after an official examination for the detection of trichinae in Germany and without requiring an American trichinae certificate.

Lastly the United States demands the admission of American cattle for immediate slaughter.

The German Government declared that it was not able to discuss the second and third points within the limitations of the tariff negotiations. The report also points out that the United States prohibits the importation of German live cattle.

The Imperial Government, as proof of its friendly disposition toward the United States Government promises to try to arrange the trichinae matter in conformity with the American wishes if the Washington authorities desire to abolish the trichinae certificate, but Permany is not able to promise either to offer a compromise or to open negotiations respecting the admission of cattle.

Expect Bill to Pass Saturday.

An extemporized commission made up of prominent members of the Reichstag will meet to-morrow and discuss the American tariff arrangement preparatory to Saturday's sitting of the Chamber. It is assumed in Government circles that the bill will pass its three readings on Saturday, which will be made possible by the calling of another sitting immediately following the adjournment of the first. The Government officials do not anticipate any serious opposition in the Reichstag. If the bill is adopted on Saturday they expect that the Bundesrath will issue a decree on Monday along with the promulgation of the tariff arrangement. The decree will define specifically the concessions which Germany makes to the United States.

It was stated at the Foreign Office today that the details of the new arrangement had been about completed at Washington, and it is believed that President Taft will be able to announce on Monday next the conclusion of a tariff agreement with Germany.

The Tageblatt referring to the agreement to-day says that the United States went a long way toward meeting Germany's wishes. In a number of points Germany is remarkably favored in the outcome of the negotiations.

MISS KENEALY NOT DYING.

Woman Who Took Poison in Daily Mail Office Will Live, Doctors Say.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Miss Annesley Kenealy, the woman journalist who tried to end her life by poison yesterday in the office of The London Daily Mail, is still seriously ill at St. Bartholomew's Hospital, where she was taken after her attempt. The doctors, however, now think she is out of danger.

Great efforts have been made to prevent the matter from becoming public, and these efforts have had such success that no paper here has yet printed the story. In fact, although the hospital authorities last night did not hesitate to say that Miss Kenealy was a patient there suffering from self-administered poison, this morning I found a change of tone, and for some time it was pretended that no such woman was there.

However, I managed to-night to get a talk with the physician in charge of the case. This physician said that Miss Kenealy was in the observation ward resting comfortably, and he thought all danger had passed.

When he was asked what poison Miss Kenealy took the doctor said he was sorry, but he could not say without the patient's permission. He added that he hoped she would be able to leave the hospital in a few days.

It has been said that laudanum was used, but the doctor would not admit it, merely saying, "I think she took more than she meant to."

This bears out the report that Miss Kenealy, who has for some time been smarting under a feeling of what she considered the injustice done her by The Daily Mail, adopted the method she did as a further means of bringing her case before the public, but overdid the dose. It is known that Miss Kenealy has been in a disturbed state of mind for some time past, and that once before she threatened to commit suicide. No further details as to the attempt are at present obtainable.

FEED 250,000 PARIS VICTIMS.

Fears of Collapse of Buildings as Seine Subsides Not Realized.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—The River Seine continues its recession, the gauge to-day showing that it has dropped nearly five feet from its crest. The fear that the buildings whose foundations had been weakened would fall as the waters receded, has, however, been realized only to a small extent. Such damage thus far has been confined to old structures in the surrounding towns, as at Courbevoie, in the region of Alfortville, Ivry, and Villeneuve-Saint-Georges, though several recent subsidences in the streets were reported today, one occurring in front of the Ministry of War.

On the other hand, present estimates are that clothing and food are being supplied to 250,000 persons in Paris and its immediate vicinity.

The relief contributions from crowned heads amount now to approximately $55,000. Other foreign subscriptions exceed $400,000. Of the $120,000 already transferred to Foreign Minister Pichon by American Ambassador Bacon, $32,000 has been turned over to the French Red Cross, in conformity to the wishes of the donors. Rodman Wanamaker, who desires to pay the bread bills of flood victims for one month, has forwarded a first installment of $6,000. A high official speaking to-day of the generosity of Americans, said that a deep impression was created by their sympathy in France.

"The French Government," he said, "and French people alike have been touched by the profound expressions of sympathy, and the liberal contributions pouring in from abroad, but none has aroused quite the same sense of gratitude as those from the people of the sister Republic across the sea. The misery is still great, and the work of relief must continue for months. See what wreckage has been left behind even here."

As he spoke, the official pointed from a window to the devastation about the Foreign Office, the high-water mark showing on the buildings nine feet above the ground, and the still flooded Rue de Constantine.

LONDON IS STIRRED BY NEW PEARY PLAN

Sir Ernest Shackleton, However, Thinks Englishman Would Win Race for South Pole.

SCOTT EAGER FOR RIVALRY

Commander for Proposed British Expedition Thinks Americans Would Greatly Help in Exploration.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—The announcement that Commander Robert E. Peary means to take a hand in the race for the discovery of the south pole by helping to send an expedition to the antarctic in the Roosevelt created intense interest here to-day, especially as it was thought possible that Sir Ernest Shackleton might also take a hand in the contest. Sir Ernest, however, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day that such was not his intention.

"I shall not be in it," he said, "though my heart and my desires are still in the antarctic. I believe that Capt. Scott has a splendid chance. His plans are sound and have been approved by the geographical authorities and explorers. The base he has chosen is safe and well known, and he knows the land for a good distance southward. He must now be allowed plenty of time for organization unhampered by a need for funds and all will be well.

"If the proposed Peary expedition is to chose Weddell Sea as the point of departure it will be hampered from the start by the necessity of making its base in an unknown portion of the antarctic continent, where, as far as we know, there is no safe landing place. It will be confronted by a great barrier of ice and will be 200 miles or so further north than Capt. Scott. I doubt if it can do anything in one season from such a point.

"I hope the British public will come forward and support Capt. Scott in every possible way. He must not be allowed to lack funds."

Capt. Scott's attitude toward Commander Peary's plans may be summed up in the old phrase, "May the best man win." He welcomes scientific co-operation in the task of exploring the antarctic. He realizes that every expedition will add to the sum of general knowledge, and therefore will help those which follow. Capt. Scott has been in communication with Commander Peary, for whom he has a great regard. The British leader is a good sportsman, and will enjoy the prospect of a race to the south pole.

PEARY EXPECTED IN BERLIN.

Explorer Will Lecture and Receive Berlin Geographical Society's Medal.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—It is announced here that Commander Robert E. Peary will arrive in Berlin in May. The discoverer of the north pole comes on the invitation of the Berlin Geographical Society to deliver an illustrated lecture before its members and invited guests. At the end of the lecture the explorer will be decorated with the society's gold medal, and a brilliant banquet in his honor will follow.

Later in the same week Commander Peary will deliver two public lectures in Berlin.

He will address the Royal Geographical Society of London on May 4.

Negotiations have practically been concluded by a firm of Leipsic publishers for the German rights to Peary's new book.

BARTLETT LOYAL TO PEARY.

Master of His Ship Resents Efforts to Stir Up International Feeling.

In reply to editorials printed in some newspapers in England and Canada condemning Commander Peary because Capt. Bartlett of the Roosevelt did not accompany him to the pole, Lawyer Charles J. Nichols of Portland, Me., announced yesterday that the Captain had given him this written statement setting forth his view of the situation:

> There has been brought to my attention recently extracts from various newspapers commenting on the fact that I did not accompany Commander Peary to the north pole. Some even go so far as to interpret this as a cause for rivalry between the English and American nations.
>
> I want to say that this was an American expedition, fitted out by American citizens, with American capital, under the command of an American explorer, and its success depended entirely upon him in whose charge the expedition set out.
>
> From his years of experience in arctic work he worked out a definite plan, and it is my judgment that had this plan been changed the pole would not have been reached. The four supporting parties were necessary and it was distinctly understood at the outset that each one of the leaders of these supporting parties should turn back at a certain point. Each party, consisting of one white man and four Eskimos, did the work for which it was best fitted on the sledge journey. For all to go on was impossible for several reasons, such as the additional loss of dogs, consumption of food, and possible exhaustion of the individual members.
>
> I was much pleased when Commander Peary selected me for the fourth or last supporting party, and I started out knowing that when I got beyond the eighty-seventh parallel I should lead back that supporting party; that I should be given this honor was very gratifying to me, and I never for a moment had any idea that I was going to the pole.
>
> Through the entire sledge trip every man did his duty as assigned to him, and not one in the entire party have I ever heard express any resentment or disappointment. Everything was harmonious, and I regret that some of the newspapers are making insinuations or attempting to inject rivalry between England and America because I was a British subject.
>
> All honor should be given Commander Peary for his almost superhuman endurance of twenty-three years of persistent effort, and I for one am fully satisfied if I aided such a man in any degree to accomplish this task. In all of his utterances and writings Commander Peary has given me full credit for all that I did, and I wish to say publicly that I would be glad of an opportunity to do again for him just what I have done.
>
> Yours very truly,
> ROBERT A. BARTLETT.

RAILWAYS FOR PHILIPPINES.

Sir Clifton Robinson to Push Project of English and American Capital.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Sir Clifton Robinson, who has severed his connection with tramway work in London, told THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent to-day that he would sail in a few days for the Philippines to carry out a confidential mission for the London financial house of Speyer Brothers. The mission is connected with a big railway scheme in those islands, in which American and English capital is greatly interested. His stay in the Philippines will last three or four months, and he will also visit America.

Arthur Stanley, an American expert, who has for some time been connected with the underground railways in London, has been appointed to the post vacated by Sir Clifton.

When Sir Clifton came to London sixteen years ago to initiate an American system of tramway traffic in the metropolis he found great opposition, a fact which astonished the American interests considerably. The system was derided as another Yankee innovation, embodying in it certain concomitants that were distasteful to the interests he appealed to for support. He met with opposition even from the Government departments, but from eight miles of lines the system has been extended under his management to fifty-five miles.

British Squadron Sails for Island—French and Italian Fleets in Readiness.

WARN TURKEY AND GREECE

Collective Note Said to Have Made It Plain That Each Must Modify Its Belligerent Attitude.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—I learn on excellent authority that the destination of the British fleet which left Malta today was not the Piraeus, as Malta dispatches have asserted, but Crete. I learn also that a collective note by the signatory powers—Great Britain, Russia, France, and Italy—guaranteeing the separate status of Crete has been sent both to Turkey and to Greece, the effect of the note being that if their belligerent attitude is not immediately modified Crete will be reoccupied by the signatory powers.

Still further and on equally good authority I learn that the French Mediterranean fleet and the Italian fleet are being held in readiness to support the British squadron.

This squadron, according to the news from Malta, is in command of Rear Admiral Sir George Astley Callaghan, second in command of the British Mediterranean fleet, and consists of the battleship Duncan, carrying the Admiral's flag, the cruisers Lancaster, Minerva, and Barham, and four torpedo boat destroyers.

ATHENS, Feb. 3.—The royal message of sanction in the convocation of a National Assembly is not likely to be issued until March, and it is practically certain that the Assembly will not be convoked before December. Any action on the part of the Cretans provocative of a crisis in the near future, involving Turkey and the European powers, therefore, is out of the question.

The Greek Government has decided to withdraw several diplomatic missions abroad in accordance with the demands of the Military League, but it is understood that the Ministers at Constantinople, Sofia, and Washington will be retained.

VENICE, Feb. 3.—G. R. Branch and Mrs. Branch of Newark, N. J., had a narrow escape from drowning last evening, when their gondola was rammed by a steamboat. Mrs. Branch leaped overboard, but her husband was carried down with the gondola. The craft remained submerged, Branch breaking his way through the window of the hood and rising to the surface. The two were picked up not much the worse for their experience.

ALLDS'S ANSWER ATTACKS CONGER

Declares Statement Made to Insurgents and That Made in Sworn Charges Differ.

TRUTH OF BOTH IS DENIED

Question of Veracity May Cause Further Revelations and Broadening of Inquiry.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 3.—An attempt to impugn the veracity of Senator Benn Conger of Tompkins, who recently filed with the Senate sworn charges that Jotham P. Allds, President pro tem. and majority leader of the upper house, had accepted a bribe of $1,000 in 1901, is the salient feature of Senator Allds's formal answer, which was filed with the Clerk of the Senate this afternoon.

The answer, which will be handed down when the Senate meets to-morrow, was made public by Lewis E. Carr, Martin W. Littleton, Lewis E. Griffith, and Danforth E. Ainsworth, counsel for Allds. The answer contains an assertion, on which much stress is laid, to the effect that in his statement before the so-called insurgent caucus Senator Conger had declared that he paid $1,000 to Allds, while in his sworn statement Conger—"to remove himself from the responsibility of a bribe giver"—had amended his original accusation to have it appear that the money was paid to Allds by some other person in his presence.

The Allds reply in full is as follows:

> I, Jotham P. Allds, Senator from the Thirty-seventh District, do hereby, pursuant to the rules adopted by the Senate on the 26th day of January, 1910, and in answer to the charges made by Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, dated Jan. 31, 1910, make and file the following statement:
>
> I am informed and believe that on the fourth day of January, 1910, at a conference of certain Senators held in the Ten Eyck Hotel in the City of Albany, N. Y., Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, stated to them and in their presence that I demanded and received from him, the said Benn Conger, as a consideration for my action as a member of the Assembly concerning proposed legislation pending before that body, a sum of money, which I am informed and believe he stated to be $1,000.
>
> Shortly after this conference information came to me concerning the statement made by the said Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, in said conference, the exact character and purport of which I was unable to ascertain.
>
> I am informed and believe that Josiah T. Newcomb, Senator from the Nineteenth District, who was a member of and present at said conference, communicated the statement made by the said Benn Conger to the editor of The Evening Post, of which paper I am informed and believe he had been, before his election to the Senate, an editorial writer, and I am informed and believe that the said Senator Newcomb is now a stockholder of a corporation which publishes and circulates The Evening Post.
>
> When the knowledge of this statement, made by the said Benn Conger, had been put into the possession of the editor of The Evening Post, I personally called upon said editor and told him that the statement made by the said Benn Conger was false and that The Evening Post ought not to publish and circulate a false statement concerning me.
>
> Notwithstanding the fact that the editor of The Evening Post was thus advised that this statement was false, and notwithstanding the fact that Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, within a few days after the matter became known, retracted his statement that he, Benn Conger, had given me money when I was a member of the Assembly and substituted in the place thereof the statement which he has since reduced to writing and made the whole of his charges upon to the effect that some one else, whom he does not name, gave me the money, The Evening Post made public the information which had been brought to it by Senator Newcomb. Thereafter, and at the earliest opportunity, I, upon a question of privilege, demanded of the Senate that an investigation be had of the charge made by the said Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, that he had paid or given me money when he was a member of the Assembly.
>
> The Senate, in response to said demand, promptly appointed a committee to formulate rules governing the procedure which should govern said investigation, and when the committee reported such rule adopted them and determined that the investigation should be conducted by a committee of the whole Senate, which rules required Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, to reduce the statement which he had made concerning me in the conference on the fourth day of January, 1910, at the Ten Eyck Hotel, to writing and to give detailed and complete specifications thereof. Pretending to comply therewith, the said Benn Conger, on Jan. 31, 1910, filed with the Clerk of the Senate a statement in which he says that Jotham P. Allds, on or about the 21st day of April, 1901, while a member of the Assembly of the State of New York, received and accepted the sum of $1,000 in the presence of the said Benn Conger at the Capitol, in the said City of Albany, and that the said sum was demanded by the said Jotham P. Allds and paid to and accepted by him as the consideration for his having refrained from pressing the passage of a certain bill before the that House;
>
> Notwithstanding that the said Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, has abandoned the original charge made by him in the conference at the Ten Eyck Hotel on the fourth day of January, 1910, that he personally gave to me the alleged sum of money while I was a member of Assembly as a consideration for my action as a member of the Assembly;
>
> Notwithstanding that the said Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, has so changed his statement as to relieve himself from the responsibility of a bribe-giver, and yet has failed to state who the bribe-giver was, and while the said Benn Conger has failed and refused to state in his charges what the bill or legislation was for which the alleged sum of money was demanded and received by me;
>
> Notwithstanding that the said Benn Conger in all essential particulars has changed his statement upon which this investigation was demanded and evaded and avoided the rules of procedure requiring him to specify in detail completely and definitely the particulars of the taking of the money by me while a member of Assembly, nevertheless:
>
> I, Jotham P. Allds, intent upon having an honest and full investigation of the matter in which my official and personal integrity was impeached by the statement of the said Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, made on Jan. 4, 1910, at the Ten Eyck Hotel, do, upon my oath, say:
>
> That I did not on or about the 23d day of April, 1901, while a member of the Assembly of the State of New York, receive and accept the sum of $1,000, or any other sum of money, as a consideration for having refrained from pressing to passage a certain bill, or any bill, pending before the House.
>
> And, first, I do say, upon my oath, that the original statement made on Jan. 4, 1910, by the said Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, at the conference at the Ten Eyck Hotel, in which he stated that he paid me a sum of money as a consideration for my action in the Assembly is untrue.
>
> Second, that the last statement of the said Benn Conger, Senator from the Forty-first District, which he has filed with the Senate, in which he says that he saw me receive a sum of money from some person whom he does not name, is untrue.

The answer is signed by Senator Allds and by Lewis E. Carr, Martin W. Littleton, Lewis E. Griffith, and Danforth E. Ainsworth, of counsel, and is sworn to before Notary Public John E. McLean of Albany County.

"I have nothing to add to my answer until I am called under oath as a witness before the Senate," said Senator Allds after the document had been filled.

Conger Is Not Surprised.

Senator Conger was served with a copy of it.

"I am not surprised at Senator Allds's denial of the charges," was all he would say.

Now that the issue has been joined, all interest at the Capitol is focussed on next week, when the investigation, which begins on Tuesday, may prove to be one of the most sensational in the annals of the New York Legislature.

As Conger's veracity has been called into question, it may be necessary to call one or more of the Senators who attended the insurgent caucus to testify to what he really did say.

From what was said in connection with the happenings at the caucus shortly after it was held, it would appear that some things said there by Senator Conger of the exploits of the Black Horse Cavalry will provide interesting reading. Since the answer was filed the impression has got around that the whole story may be told. Mr. Carr, Mr. Littleton, or any of the other lawyers who represent Allds is not willing to make any statement in reference to the case.

The Evening Post printed the following statement yesterday afternoon:

"Josiah T. Newcomb, Senator from the Nineteenth District, is not, and never has been, a stockholder in The New York Evening Post, as Allds stated in his charges to-day, nor was Newcomb ever employed permanently as an editorial writer on that paper, although he contributed occasional editorials."

BILL FOR NEW COURT HOUSE.

Senate Passes It and It Will Now Go to the Mayor.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Feb. 3.—Without a dissenting vote the Senate to-day passed the Grady-Conklin bill, giving authority to build a new county and city court building in New York City on the site of the present Court House and land adjoining in City Hall Park. The bill now goes to Mayor Gaynor.

Lawyers, Judges, and others interested are understood to be in harmony so far as the location of the new court building is concerned, and it is expected that as soon as the bill is signed preparations will be made at once to award contracts so that work may be begun in the Spring. The existing law prohibits the use of additional land in City Hall Park, and the bill passed to-day removes that prohibition.

LESLIE CARTER APPEALS AGAIN

Lost Two Previous Appeals on Costumer's Judgment for $1,375.

Mrs. Leslie Carter, the actress, has appealed from a judgment against her in the City Court for $1,375 for theatrical costumes supplied by Mme. Hermann, to the Federal Court. The case was first appealed to the Appellate Term, and then to the Appellate Division, Mrs. Carter losing each time.

Although Mme. Hermann's claim was not included in the schedule of debts when Mrs. Carter went into bankruptcy, Mrs. Carter sought release from the claim on the ground that the gowns had not been completed or delivered at the time of the bankruptcy.

Her attorney, Nathaniel Levy, took the case to the Federal courts yesterday on a writ of error on the bankruptcy question, and stated that he was prepared to take the case to the Supreme Court of the United States.

PLEA FOR CHIVALRY IS AULD'S DEFENSE

A Young Girl Is in the Safekeeping of Every Naval Officer, Says His Counsel.

CRITICISES COWLES'S ACTS

Judge Advocate Says There Was No Justification for the Attack—Findings to Go to Washington.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 3.—"Must our officers of the navy stand by and see the daughter of a brother officer insulted?" asked Major Henry Leonard, counsel for Paymaster Auld, U. S. N., in the course of his argument this afternoon at the closing session of the court-martial sitting at the Charlestown Navy Yard to consider the charges against Auld.

Miss Dorothy Hesler, over whose picture the trouble arose, was among the crowd of listeners. Nearly all the witnesses who have testified during the trial and who had been excluded from the courtroom, except when they were on the stand, were present.

Major A. W. Catlin, the Judge Advocate, made the first argument. He said that the character of the evidence introduced by the defense was such as to make it unnecessary for him to say more than a few words. He declared that there was nothing worthy of consideration that had been introduced against Dr. Cowles.

The Judge Advocate said that the insinuations and accusations made against Dr. Cowles should not be considered by the court, as they never had been even heard of before the navy yard dance.

"Is there any cause," asked the Judge Advocate, "why a guest should be so treated at a navy yard ball? If so, then any guest may be subject to insult."

Major Catlin said that Dr. Cowles's act in calling Auld a cur was not sufficient cause for the assault. The evidence, he said, showed that five minutes elapsed between the use of the word "cur" and the assault, during which time the Paymaster went away and then returned and deliberately committed the assault.

In concluding the Judge Advocate said that he would not ask that the court find Auld guilty on the second count, that of committing a falsehood, but he would ask that the court find him guilty on the first and third allegations, which charge conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman and assault on Dr. Cowles.

Major Leonard, in opening his argument, said that it had been charged that Auld acted without the authority of any responsible person. He said in reply that "Auld was a member of the Hop Committee, a gentleman, and a man."

He said that defense admitted that Dr. Cowles was invited to the dance, and admitted that he was a guest, but did not concede that he was "properly invited." He said that it was highly improper for Dr. Cowles to seek an engagement to meet Miss Hesler at Sullivan Square and to suggest giving her flowers and candy.

"A young girl, and especially if she be the daughter of a former officer of the navy," said Leonard, "is in the safekeeping of every officer in the navy."

He said that there was nothing in Auld's request to Dr. Cowles except an invitation for him to leave the hall, that Auld did not want a conflict and realized the impropriety of a scene at the dance.

"Auld did not realize for a moment," said Major Leonard, "that the guest on being invited to leave would show that he had a skin like a rhinoceros. Auld thought that Dr. Cowles would know what he meant and would leave immediately and without trouble."

The court will probably consider the case in executive session to-morrow morning, and will then send its written findings to the Secretary of the Navy at Washington without making them known here.

Passed Asst. Surgeon A. S. Robnett, who was coupled with Paymaster Auld in the original charges, will be tried on Monday. None of the evidence produced at the Auld trial during the last three days can be used in the trial of Dr. Robnett.

The delay in fixing the date for the trial of Dr. Robnett was by agreement of the Judge Advocate and counsel for the doctor, and was granted in order to allow each side sufficient time to prepare its case.

It was said at the navy yard to-day that in the event of the court deciding adversely to Paymaster Auld his case will be appealed to Washington for final adjudication by Secretary of the Navy Meyer. Joseph Auld of Burlington, Vt., father of Paymaster Auld, is quoted as saying that he is ready to spend every penny he possesses to obtain his son's vindication.

The largest showing of E. & W. Shirts ever presented at one time by one house.

E. & W. Shirts—master products of a masterful organization.

An exposition of E. & W. Shirts on view in the display windows of both stores.

Since men regard the mark E. & W. in its relation to Shirts the same as they regard the mark Sterling in its relation to silver, it is hardly necessary for us to add our share of praise.

What we would impress is this: Never have the master products of E. & W. been so comprehensively exploited. Wm. Vogel & Son and the patrons of Wm. Vogel & Son will derive the direct benefits of the power, the resources, the ingenuity represented by Earl & Wilson in the matter of shirt-making.

In fabrics and color schemes not even all the custom shirt makers collectively can show such beauty, such variety, such originality. It is the first time that the E. & W. people have made a shirt to retail for as low as 1.50, and it has been our good fortune to have a goodly assortment of them at 1.50 as well as at 2.00, 2.50, 3.00, 3.50 and 5.00.

January Leadership in Automobile Advertising

In January The New York Times printed 78,290 agate lines of automobile advertising—a greater volume than any other newspaper, morning or evening, and the greatest volume of automobile advertising ever printed by any newspaper in one month.

Because of the automobile shows more automobile advertising is printed in the metropolitan newspapers in January than in any other month. The fact that The New York Times carried more automobile advertising than any other newspaper demonstrates the regard in which The Times is held as an automobile advertising medium.

The New York Times counts among its readers more persons with the means and inclination to purchase motor cars than any other newspaper.

GIVE JESUP STATUE TO HISTORY MUSEUM

Gift from Friends Associated with Him in Work of the Institution.

UNVEILED NEXT WEDNESDAY

J. Pierpont Morgan, Henry Fairfield Osborn, Cleveland H. Dodge, Charles Lanier, J. Hampden Robb, Joseph H. Choate, and many others associated with the late Morris K. Jesup in the direction of the American Museum of Natural History have given the museum a life-size marble statue of Mr. Jesup, which is to be unveiled on next Wednesday afternoon.

The statue, which has now been put in place in the foyer of the museum, though concealed from the visitors' gaze by a white cloth, is the work of William Couper, the sculptor. For nearly two years Mr. Couper has been at work on the statue, and those who have seen it say it is so far the artist's masterpiece. It is of Carrara marble, and was cut from the same block as Mr. Couper's statue of ex-Mayor Abraham Hewitt, executed by him some years ago.

Mr. Jesup is represented as seated on a dais two feet high, with arms resting on the arms of his chair. The left hand holds a scroll. The attitude is that of a man conversing with friends. The dress is of the conventional frock coat, which Mr. Jesup usually wore. It is understood that the statue cost about $15,000.

The unveiling on next Wednesday at 4 o'clock is expected to bring together many notables of this and other cities. The foyer, where the exercises will be held, can be made to seat only about 500, so admission will have to be by card only. The Board of Trustees of the museum and donors of the statue will occupy seats on the platform, while seats immediately in front of it will be reserved for Mrs. Jesup, the widow, and members of her family. Addresses will be delivered by Mr. Osborn, who succeeded Mr. Jesup as President of the museum; Mayor Gaynor, and Joseph H. Choate.

Mr. Jesup, with Theodore Roosevelt, father of ex-President Roosevelt, and a number of other wealthy men prominent in New York half a century ago, was one of the founders of the museum. He was also President for a number of years up to the time of his death and its largest contributor. Besides his liberal gifts in his lifetime, he left it $1,000,000 in his will, which doubled the institution's endowment.

What scientists consider remarkable "documentary evidence" that coal is derived from vegetation in prehistoric ages has been presented to the museum by President E. E. Loomis of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Coal Company. This is a full stump of a tree, with outspreading roots, which has turned to coal, but retained every original line. It was found recently in an old mine belonging to the company at Scranton, Penn.

To his nephew and law partner Mr. Langbein leaves his law books. The will is dated Nov. 14, 1907.

WILL DENOUNCES HIS FAMILY.

Frank A. Burrelle Put in His Opinion of His First Wife and Children.

The will of Frank A. Perry Burrelle, head of Burrelle's Press Clipping Bureau, who died on Jan. 25 on shipboard in the Gulf of Mexico, was filed yesterday. It shows that the internal affairs of the Burrelle family were in a strained condition, to say the least.

Mr. Burrelle leaves $100 to the New York Press Club and requests that he be buried in the plot of that club. To his daughter, Mignon Hazel Burrelle, and his son, Douglas Curtis Burrelle, both of 201 West Eighty-eighth Street, he leaves an income of $20 and $10 a week, respectively, during the life of his wife, Nelle M. Burrelle of 203 West Fifty-fourth Street.

On her death, the testator leaves twenty shares of stock in the Burrelle Press Clipping Bureau to his daughter and ten shares to his son. The residue is left to his wife, and it is stipulated that should any beneficiary oppose the probating of the will, he or she shall forfeit the legacy bequeathed.

A further clause of the will reads:

> In making these bequests and no others, I have in mind that my former wife, Julia Burrelle, has not acted toward me in the past in ways satisfactory to me and is now harassing me with litigation over the provisions of the decree of divorce between us and causing me much expense; that my children, Mignon, Hazel, and Douglas Curtis, have taken a stand against me and also have not acted in a manner satisfactory to me; that I have tried to bring up my son to learn and take an active part in the press-clipping business and have found him lacking in attention or ability to attend to this business.
>
> That I have further had in mind that the present condition of my business is largely due to the work and ability of my wife, Nelle M. Burrelle, and that I consider her the most capable person I know to conduct this business.

The will, which is dated June 12, 1908, then says:

> I hereby declare that I, or the Burrelle Press Clipping Bureau, have given at different times to Nelle M. Burrelle, in consideration of money advanced or for services performed by her or as gifts by me, shares of stock in the Burrelle Press Clipping Bureau amounting in all to 51 shares, and I understand that, up to this point of my will, only 49 shares of the stock of this corporation have been disposed of. But to avoid any dispute or question as to the title of Nelle M. Burrelle to these 51 shares of stock, I hereby give all of these shares to Nelle M. Burrelle, or any right, title or interest I may have in these 51 shares of stock.

BAIT FOR ALL THE DRAKES.

$200,000,000 Drake Estate Which Farmer Drake Told About Before Arrest.

A transplanted farmer from Huntersville, Minn., who passes under the name of Syrous M. Drake and declares he is a descendant of Sir Francis Drake, was taken before United States Commissioner Shields in the Federal Building yesterday charged by Post Office Inspector Kent with being engaged in a scheme to defraud. The former agriculturist is accused of working the familiar game of sending word to his namesakes around the country that he had discovered records here proving the existence of a $200,000,000 estate distributable to heirs of the Admiral.

Inspector Hunt has obtained a letter which Drake wrote to Fanny Cagle of Hodgensville, Ky., beginning "Dear Cousin," and telling of a search of the "Hall of Records in Wall Street," which led to the discovery of the fortune. Drake also told of an alleged meeting of the Drake heirs in October, at which, he said, several millionaires were present. He got $30 from Fanny Cagle, got $150 from J. C. Drake of Whitfield, Ky., and $10 from a man named Miller of Corsicana, Texas.

When arraigned before Commissioner Shields yesterday Drake was illy clad and had his coat pinned together at the top to conceal the absence of a collar. The Commissioner held him in $2,000 bail for examination Feb. 18. Inspector Hunt has been looking long for Drake, and finally landed him at one of the Post Office substations, where he had gone for his mail.

SUFFRAGETTES SEE LEDERLE.

Wanted Health Commissioner to Condemn Frozen Eggs and Meat.

The suffragettes gave away many "Votes for Women" buttons, but received nothing but good wishes in their call upon Health Commissioner Lederle yesterday afternoon. They had a resolution to present asking for the condemnation of overfrozen meat and eggs, and wanted the Commissioner to put on women meat Inspectors.

"I should be perfectly willing to have women meat Inspectors if they can pass the civil service examination," said Mr. Lederle, "but at present there is nothing I can do about it. We have one woman milk Inspector, but as I have only been on my job for two weeks I don't know how she has been doing her work."

There was a small army of the suffragettes at the Health Board rooms. They were courteously received and allowed to tell all the troubles people were having with bad food.

"I haven't any redress for anything of that kind myself," said Commissioner Lederle. "I sent the maid at my house out for some ham the other day, and that she brought back was the worse for wear, but the only thing I can do is to change my butcher."

The Commissioner had his picture taken as an honorary suffragette, with the suffragette party. All the office force ran after suffragette buttons in order to be honorary suffragettes, too.

SPEED JACK JOHNSON'S CASE.

Trial for Assault Moved to Supreme Court to Get Earlier Attention.

That Jack Johnson, the negro pugilist, under indictment for assault in the second degree, may be more speedily tried, his case was moved to the Criminal Branch of the Supreme Court yesterday, with the consent of District Attorney Whitman.

It will fall to Assistant District Attorney Moss, who so far has handled nothing but homicides, to try the prizefighter before Justice Goff, probably within a fortnight.

DOCTORS PROTEST AGAINST AUTO SMOKE

Petition the Health Board to Abate the Nuisance Caused by Gasoline Vapors.

PERIL TO PEOPLE'S THROATS

Invalids Who Drive Injured by the Fumes—Streets Should Be Freed Like the Parks.

A movement against the smoke nuisance created by automobiles was begun yesterday, when the National Highways Protective Society sent to the Board of Health a petition, signed by fifty well-known physicians of the city, asking the board to take up a crusade against offending chauffeurs.

Counsel for the Highways Society have discovered, after some investigation, that the city's Charter puts the smoke nuisance under control of the Board of Health, and in the petition the board is reminded of this. The petition reads:

> To the Board of Health, City of New York:
>
> We, the undersigned physicians of the City of New York, some of whom are members of the National Highways Protective Society, hereby petition your body to put a stop to the practice of operators of motor vehicles in ejecting smoke from the exhaust pipes of their cars, as it is injurious to the health of the citizens. As Section 1,171 of the Charter of the City gives you the power to do this, we trust that you will take strenuous measures to eliminate this nuisance.

Among the physicians signing the petition are Henry H. Curtis of 118 Madison Avenue; Nathaniel B. Potter, 48 West Fifty-first Street; Charles McBurney, 38 East Thirty-first Street; J. Ralph Jacoby, 54 West Eighty-eighth Street; Lawrence B. Bangs, George W. Jacoby, 44 West Seventy-second Street; John H. P. Hodgson, 29 Washington Square, and William M. Polk.

At the headquarters of the Highways Society it was said yesterday that protests against the nuisance have been received from others than physicians. Letters have been pouring in to the organization from men of prominence in the city urging the society to take some action that will stop the smoke nuisance. The Fifth Avenue Association and the Women's Municipal League have joined the fight, and both organizations have sent letters to the Highways Society pledging their full support.

For some time agents of the society have been watching the development of the smoke pest, and their reports show that it has been persistently increasing. The only real effort to stop the nuisance, of which the Highways Society has cognizance, was that made by Park Commissioner Smith, who a year ago prohibited the passing of smoking automobiles through Central Park.

It was a successful fight, as far as it went, for after some hundred arrests the belching of gasoline-laden smoke from machine running through the Park practically ceased. No effort was made to check the nuisance in other parts of the city, however, and gradually it has grown to great proportions.

According to the Highways Society's agents the taxicabs are general offenders, although other classes of vehicles run them close. The police have made no arrests in the streets, because there is no city ordinance covering the situation. In the case of the Park arrests, fines were imposed under a park ordinance dealing with nuisances in a general sense.

Until the Highways Society set its counsel at work on the problem there seemed no solution. A provision in the city charter making the Board of Health responsible for the extermination of nuisances was at length unearthed, and this, the society is convinced, will cover the situation provided the Health Board is willing to act.

Dr. Curtis, one of the signers of the petition, in explaining why psysicians are interested in the effort to have the smoke nuisance abated, said yesterday that hundreds of New Yorkers are suffering from what he called vaso-motor rhinitis, which in plain terms is inflammation of the membranes of the nose and throat.

"It is absolutely dangerous for persons having any affliction of the nose, throat, or lungs to ride through the streets of New York behind one of the smoke-producing automobiles," said Dr. Curtis. "The air filled with gasoline smoke produces an inflammation of the membranes that makes any disturbance worse. Any one suffering with a cold needs fresh oxygen to breathe in, and gasoline vapor will not produce it.

"Invalids driving through the streets can derive no benefit from it if they are compelled to inhale these noxious fumes. I have treated hundreds of cases of vaso-motor rhinitis caused by this automobile nuisance. It is much the same as hay fever.

"New York is unfortunate in that the police have not been able to tackle this nuisance. In France the drivers of smoking automobiles are arrested and fined and the nuisance is reduced to a minimum. I hope the Board of Health takes up the matter, for it appears that it has absolute authority, and with a little effort it seems that the nuisance ought to be abated."

The solution of the smoke pest, according to those who have studied it, lies in compelling drivers of automobiles to regulate the amount of oil in the lubricating cylinders. By filling the cylinders to the brim clouds of smoke are produced, which the mufflers cannot stop. The agitators against the nuisance argue that if it could be checked in Central Park it can be abated everywhere in the city.

Mrs. Cothren on Equal Pay Committee.

President Mitchel announced the appointment yesterday of Mrs. F. H. Cothern of 173 South Oxford Street, Brooklyn, to the commission to investigate the matter of equal pay for women teachers. She is a graduate of Vassar and has a degree of M. A. from Columbia for special courses in economics and history. She studied in the Law School of New York University and was admitted to the bar last year. She is a member of the Finance Committee of the Women's Trade Union League.

ENDS STENTON WILL CONTEST

Surrogate Declines to Reopen Case for Gibson on New Evidence Offered.

Surrogate Thomas denied yesterday the application of Burton W. Gibson of 116 Nassau Street to reopen the contest on the will of Louisa M. Stenton on the ground of new evidence. Mrs. Stenton left an estate valued at about $75,000, and Gibson, as executor and sole beneficiary, sought to have a copy of an alleged will admitted to probate. After a bitter fight the Surrogate threw out the Gibson will on the ground that Gibson's testimony was "uncorroborated and not to be believed."

At the trial Gibson testified that he could not remember having spoken to any one of the existence of a will prior to the death of Mrs. Stenton. Shortly after the Surrogate's decision, according to an affidavit of Gibson, he suddenly recalled that he had certain conversations previous to Mrs. Stenton's death with Everley M. Davis, a lawyer of 60 Wall Street, and Dr. William B. Pritchard, a nerve specialist of 143 West Seventy-second Street, relating to the existence of the will. He says he saw these men on Jan. 21 and 24, and that they recalled the conversations and made affidavits to that effect.

Davis, in his affidavit, says he remembers having a talk with Gibson in 1906 shortly after the murder of Mrs. Stenton's daughter, Mrs. Kinan, and among other questions he remembers asking Gibson whether Mrs. Stenton had made a will. He says Gibson replied that she had and that he was named as executor. Dr. Pritchard, in his affidavit, says that he was consulted by Gibson as a nerve specialist, and that he examined Mrs. Stenton's papers to determine in a measure her mental condition. He says that Gibson told him that Mrs. Stenton had made a will, which he had drafted at her request, and that he was the executor.

In his decision denying the application Surrogate Thomas says:

"The new evidence would not be admissible on a retrial, for it consists solely of the testimony of third persons as to self-serving declarations made by the witness, Mr. Gibson, in the absence of all persons having any interest in the present controversy."

L. H. JEROME AMONG OUSTED.

Ex-District Attorney's Brother Was a City Corporation Inspector.

It was learned yesterday that one of the Corporation Inspectors in the office of the Borough President of Manhattan who resigned before Mr. McAneny made his removals, was Lovell H. Jerome, a brother of ex-District Attorney Jerome. He was appointed in 1902 by Borough President Cantor and received $1,200 a year. He was assigned to the Metropolitan Street Railway Company. Mr. Jerome has also been a confidential agent in the Custom House for several years.

Another resignation was that of Samuel Prince, the labor man, who was recently appointed Deputy Commissioner of Licenses by the Mayor.

Mr. McAneny issued this statement yesterday in reference to the dismissal of Inspectors:

"I should like to have it made clear that in giving out the list of District Corporation Inspectors, dropped a few days ago, I did so without any comment on the personal history or upon the standing in any other respect of any man affected. As I proposed to drop the entire force, and as their qualifications were not, therefore, of immediate interest to me, I did not go very deeply into the matter of their records. I was asked for the list by representatives of the press. As I considered it naturally a public record, I produced it. Whatever references are made by individuals upon it have been, however, the result of inquiries made from the outside, and not by me."

Head of Windsor Trust Co. Says He Had Confidence in Birmingham.

President John A. Young of the Windsor Trust Company was on the witness stand throughout yesterday's hearing in the trial of Stirling Birmingham, the man accused of having accepted the promise of a fee when the bond department of which he was manager acted as intermediary for the loan that lost to F. Augustus Heinze some $100,000 worth of copper stock. The case was adjourned, with Mr. Young still under cross-examination.

The substance of Mr. Young's testimony was to the effect that he had given very little personal attention to the case, leaving it like most of its kind in the hands of Mr. Birmingham, an employe in whom he had great confidence.

It was said that the Windsor company was anxious that Mr. Birmingham should not be tried, and it came out in Mr. Young's cross-examination yesterday that he had been in consultation with the lawyers for the defense earlier in the week.

PERIN GIVES UP HOPE OF ESCAPING ASYLUM

Seeks Reconciliation with His Family, and Jerome, His Counsel, Offers No Defense.

ASKS FOR HIS PAPERS

Dr. MacDonald Testifies That Perin Smoked Cigarettes Incessantly and Boasted of His Capacity for Liquor.

Lawrence Perin, the wealthy young Baltimorean, realized yesterday for the first time that his fight to keep out of a sanitarium was practically lost and that within a few days he would probably be placed in some institution. A moment after this realization came to him there was an affecting reconciliation between himself and his brother, Oliver Perin, who has been acting for the Perin family in trying to have Lawrence placed in an institution for the insane.

The alienists had just finished testifying before Referee J. Sidney Bernstein as to Mr. Perin's mental condition, and William Travers Jerome, counsel for young Perin, had told his client that it would be better to let the matter stand as it was without an effort to refute their testimony. Then Lawrence called to his brother:

"Come over here, Oliver. I want to talk to you."

Oliver Perin, who had not looked at his brother during the hearing before the referee, glanced at Lawrence and shook his head.

"Mr. Jerome will take that chair in a moment," he said quietly, as Lawrence pointed to an empty seat beside him.

"Well, I'll come over there," said Lawrence, and started across the room. He took a seat beside Oliver, and, speaking in a tone loud enough to be heard all over the room, said:

"Now, Oliver, let us shake hands. What's the use of all this? I want you to go down to Baltimore and tell mother to come up here and have things fixed up. Will you do it?"

Oliver Perin whispered that he would do as his brother asked.

"How is mother?" asked Lawrence, and when told that she was all right he wanted to know something of his little son, who, after the suicide of Mrs. Lawrence Perin in Europe several months ago, was taken charge of by Mr. Perin's father-in-law, Mr. Sartori. Oliver told him that the child was in good hands and would be in this country soon.

"I am sorry I have made so much trouble for you all," said Lawrence, in a broken voice, and his brother's eyes filled with tears.

"Tell Frank that I withdraw all those requests about the estate. I thought when I came here that I was to be given a jury trial, and I could have proved to a jury that I am sane, but I made a mistake. I would like you and mother to be appointed Trustees for my property. I will give you the list of it all, and I would like you to continue the memorial to my dead wife."

Tears by this time were trickling down Oliver Perin's face, and he wiped them away with his handkerchief.

"Wherever they send me please get my clothes and bring them to me," continued Lawrence. "I have had no clean clothes since I arrived here from abroad, more than two weeks ago. And I wish you would let me have my papers, too. I would like you to go over them with me." He blamed United States Consul Norton at Malaga and Consul Holt at Tangier for financial troubles.

"Don't send me to Dr. MacDonald's sanitarium at Central Valley," continued Lawrence Perin. "Send me to some place where they are not prejudiced against me already, some place where I can have creature comforts."

Mr. Jerome entered the room at this juncture, for he had been conferring just outside the door with Dr. Austin Flint.

"Come back here," said Mr. Jerome, upon noticing that his client was talking to Oliver.

"I have had a thorough understanding with my brother, and I withdraw all that nonsense about estates," said Lawrence, as he resumed his seat beside Mr. Jerome.

A little before this scene took place two alienists, Dr. Carlo F. MacDonald and Dr. Lawrence J. Sloacum, had told the referee they believed Perin to be insane.

Dr. MacDonald said that Perin, when at the sanitarium in Central Valley, insisted on going for a walk through the snow in a pair of canvas tennis shoes. "He smoked cigarettes incessantly," said Dr. MacDonald said, "and insisted on denouncing the doctors. He also said that doctors and lawyers were no good, with the exception of Judge Jerome. Mr. Perin was a great swearer and said he learned to swear in the railroad business and never got over it. He told me one time that he could control his pulse and could run it down to 40 from 90 by lying on a sofa and bending his knees up under his chin.

"He told me once he could drink more liquor than any other man and that on one occasion he drank three quart bottles of champagne and a quart of whisky at one sitting, without showing the effects of it."

Referee Bernstein will make his report to Justice Hendrick of the Supreme Court in a few days and in the meanwhile Mr. Perin will be detained in Bellevue.

DISCRETIONARY ENFORCEMENT OF LAW.

It is to be regretted that President Taft is unwilling to suspend the operation of the Corporation Tax law until its Constitutionality has been passed upon by the Supreme Court. Lawyers, Judges, and other prosy persons will be startled, we presume, by the suggestion that the President has the power to suspend a law of Congress. The Constitution does not expressly vest the Executive with this power—indeed, it contains some pretty strong expressions of a contrary import—but it is probably no longer open to question that the power exists.

Our authority for this assertion is the President himself. In the White House conference concerning the Corporation Tax yesterday Mr. Mead, Secretary of the Merchants' Association of this city, pointed out to the President the necessity of a prompt amendment of that provision of the law which makes the returns of the corporations public records. He said, with entire propriety, that great harm would be done to many corporations by exposing the condition and details of their business to the inspection of competitors. The President declared, so it is reported, that he would consent to no amendment of the law. But he intimated, according to the report, that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue would be instructed to use discretion in the degree of publicity accorded to the returns. We quote upon this point the Washington dispatch to our neighbor The Evening Post:

> It was suggested that information tending to show the capitalization, and net profits of corporations might be given to the public, but that all other detailed information such as might be made use of by a business competitor to the detriment of the corporation, should be treated by the Government as confidential. It is believed that the new regulation will follow in general some such line as was indicated by to-day's conversation at the White House.

Of course, if the President can suspend one section of the act, he can suspend the whole statute. Section 6 relating to the publicity of the returns is as follows:

> When the assessment shall be made as provided in this section, the returns, together with any corrections thereof which may have been made by the Commissioner, shall be filed at the office of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and shall constitute public records and be open to inspection as such.

There is nothing permissive about that language. It is mandatory. The word is "shall," not "may." If President Taft encouraged his visitor to believe that this provision of the law would be suspended or tempered, or enforced only so far as the Executive saw fit, we must assume that the power to suspend a law of Congress does exist, and may be exercised by the Executive. Mr. Taft is a Constitutional lawyer of high standing, he has been a Federal Judge. When, therefore, he takes it upon himself to treat as "confidential" records which Congress has said shall be "public," the mere novelty and startling character of the doctrine advanced become negligible by reason of the high authority of its propounder.

The doctrine is not so novel, after all. It is only putting into words what this and past Administrations have put into deeds. The Sherman act declares that "every combination" of a certain described character is unlawful. It is the duty of the Executive to cause such combinations to be prosecuted and broken up. There are hundreds, doubtless thousands, of corporations in the country that exist and are doing business in open violation of the act of 1890. Only a chosen few have been prosecuted. So far as the others are concerned, the law is and has been suspended by President Taft and his predecessors.

This brings it about that we now have a Government of men, not of laws. It may be protested that the laws are so bad and unenforceable that the Executive must in mercy and in prudence enforce them with great discretion, and as little as possible. If we pay heed to such protests, confusion becomes worse confounded. That is an open condoning of the Executive practice in enforcing at its pleasure, or in refusing to enforce, the laws of the United States.

If the President assented to the suggestion that the publicity provision of the Corporation Tax law should be enforced only in part, he by that act admitted that the provision is bad, harmful, and dangerous. Yet he will not consent to its amendment. He prefers procedure by disobeying the law. It is this temper of the official mind at Washington that is responsible for much of the present uneasiness in business circles. When the Executive sets itself above the law, no man, no corporation feels safe. The whole mighty current of history that has curbed autocratic power by Constitutions is reversed. This is one of many evidences that something like chaos reigns at Washington.

THE ACADEMY OF DESIGN.

Mr. John W. Alexander's statement, at a public dinner in this City Wednesday night, that the National Academy of Design was compelled to leave 1,330 accepted pictures unhung this Winter, for lack of wall space, and would be compelled to put aside 1,665 worthy works in its Spring exhibition, should be generally taken to heart. It is an authoritative statement, and its logical meaning is that the Academy needs a large, well-lighted, eligibly situated public gallery. In the controversy over the proposed admission of the gallery to Central Park last Winter The Times cordially approved of that view of the institution's needs. Its only contention was that neither the National Academy nor any other institution should be permitted to encroach on Central Park.

If there is a suitable plot of ground elsewhere for a site the City might well afford to secure it and transfer it to the National Academy. Undoubtedly property could be obtained on West Fifty-ninth Street, in the Circle or on Broadway nearby. The Academicians seem to be determined not to build on 110th Street, where they own land. Probably, if the City is not inclined to incur the expense of giving land to the Academy, a direct appeal to its inhabitants would soon result in the subscription of a substantial fund. We have much respect and admiration for the National Academy of Design. That the encouragement lost to American artists, whose work receives the approval of its committees but is crowded out of the exhibitions because the wall space is so inadequate, is deplorable nobody will deny. American art deserves encouragement. We are confident, however, that the members of the Academy can secure a permanent building suitably situated if they set to work to get it in the right way, and work zealously and intelligently.

RIVALRY OPEN AND HONEST.

The Springfield Republican, a paper which we have several times been tempted to suspect of a slight prejudice against Commander Peary, now renews the suspicion by charging him with having abandoned, as regards the south pole, the theory of pre-emption which he criticised Dr. Cook for ignoring. The abandonment of that theory, The Republican delicately says, comes "now that it is no longer useful in his business," and it is much disturbed by fear of what the English explorers, Scott and Shackleton, will think about the sending of an American expedition into the antarctic region in rivalry with their own endeavors to reach the south pole.

As usual, The Republican means well—it simply doesn't know. For one thing, Commander Peary never claimed an exclusive right to seek the north pole. He only said that it violated the established ethics of honorable explorers for one man to choose a particular route which another man had selected and opened, and to use in competition with him men whom that other man had trained and material which he had collected. Nothing of this sort is purposed by the expedition to which Commander Peary has offered his ship, his advice, and his assistance. On the contrary, it is to start its land journey from a point on the edge of the antarctic continent about as far as possible from that in which the English have acquired the sort of ownership which the Commander is only one of many explorers to contend. There will be a race to the pole, but it will be by a wholly new route. Why, therefore, is The Republican troubled? Why does it grieve over an inconsistency which he has not displayed?

Further to soothe The Republican's anxiety, we can inform it that the British explorers have already been consulted in regard to the sending out of an American expedition at the same time as their own. Like the good sportsmen they are, they expressed entire satisfaction with the plan, hoped it would be carried out, and made emphatic statement of the fact that thus would the scientific observations of each party be much enhanced in value by being made synchronously on opposite sides of the antarctic continent. The only rivalry will be in getting to the pole first, and that will be a fair fight, conducted with vigor, but without a trace of bitterness. As to its outcome, luck will count for something, courage, endurance, and determination for more, and these are qualities with which both parties will be well supplied.

PAINFUL INCIDENTS IN WALL STREET.

According to the latest circular of the National City Bank, the Controller of the Currency recently declared that "there is practically not a National bank in all the United States at the present time whose condition is regarded as unsatisfactory." A year ago "there were several hundred banks out of the 7,000 associations doing business under National charters which were regarded, and had for many years been considered, by the officials of the Controller's office as being either unsound or poorly managed."

The currency situation is not quite so satisfactory. We have more circulating medium than we need, and the inability of the bond-secured currency to adapt itself to varying business conditions is notorious. Nevertheless, the "inflation," if it may so be called, is not serious, and nobody entertains the slightest doubt that the banknotes and Government notes in his pocket or in his safe are worth their face value, and will continue to be worth their face value.

The business of the country is highly prosperous, the railroads are publishing most encouraging statements of earnings, and we have recently harvested crops of enormous value.

Any emotional person who feels the foundations of his confidence somewhat shaken by the recurrence in Wall Street of those phenomena described in stock market reports as "violent breaks," may reassure himself by the reflection that the disturbances in that centre are not due to banking conditions, currency conditions, or business conditions. Panics and prolonged trade depression do not come upon us when the banks, the currency, and business are sound. The "violent breaks" must be due to some other cause, and they are not to be construed as forerunners of a panic.

The trained observer may conclude that hidden causes are operative in Wall Street, causes having no special relation to the business and banking condition of the country. In other words, it is possible that there is a "game" going on there. The "game" in Wall Street may be treated in one of two ways: It may be watched from the outside, with simple curiosity, but without any desire to learn by experience how it is played. Or, if that desire be present, one may get a lot of information about the game by taking a hand and playing it. One of the first things learned, doubtless, at this particular juncture will be that the rules of the play are made and changed without notice by certain insiders. Success would be assured if the outsider could get at the minds and purposes of the insiders. That rarely happens. So anybody who really burns with the wish to know all about the game must be prepared, if he plays it, to pay the cost of acquiring knowledge in that way. The cost will be proportioned to the volume and value of information sought.

FOLLY OF THE AULD CASE.

The Auld court-martial is either a poor joke or a sad revelation of petty mismanagement in the affairs of an important branch of the Federal service, according to the temper and habits of mind of the observer. It is easy enough to laugh at it, with some constraint, to be sure, for it is not really amusing, and to set it down, offhand, as another manifestation of the little jealousies and rancors of garrison and naval post life. Jealousies and petty misunderstandings disturb social life everywhere. They are not often important enough to put before the public.

The worst feature of this case is the idea that has spread abroad that something is hidden, some secret of terrible importance, some strange tale of misdoings that would be delightfully shocking to all the gossips if told. Probably there is nothing in the case that has not been revealed in the evidence, nothing of National importance, nothing calling for the formal interference of the authorities and an awe-inspiring court-martial.

The young Paymaster, who has been on trial, had an encounter with a civilian in the lobby of a ballroom. A young Surgeon seems to have aided and abetted him, with sympathy at least. Perhaps the young men should have been spanked and sent to bed without supper. The incident need not have been spread on the public records. Secretary Meyer is to be warmly commended for his efforts to suppress this trivial case. It is a pity that he was not successful. It is a pity, too, that any part of the valuable time of a Secretary of the Navy should be wasted on the consideration of a matter so utterly trivial, a matter, too, that will probably be left by the court-martial precisely where it was before the trial was ordered.

WASTE IN THE PAPER TRADE.

Americans are proverbially wasteful, but even on the American scale the waste in the paper trade, as described by Mr. John Norris in yesterday's Times, is shocking. He asserts that material enough is wasted to make eight times as much paper as is consumed. The money value of the waste is $458,000,000, and $50,000,000 of that sum is a tax on the diffusion of knowledge and entertainment by printing. We are all in favor of preservation of the forests, but only 69 per cent. of the wood pulp is made into paper. Moreover, the manufacturing wastes defile the streams, and the excessive weight of the product due to bad methods of manufacture swells the postal revenues, to the loss of those who pay the postage, and of the taxpayers who make good the postal deficiency. Mr. Norris quotes expert opinion to the effect that the paper trade is the most inexpertly conducted within his knowledge.

Here is an inviting opening for those who have a talent for economic organization. It is said that the Chicago packers use all of the hog except the squeal, and it is also said that the Standard Oil Trust recognizes no such thing as waste products, finding use for everything. It is known that they now make profitable use of the sludge which they emptied into the harbor until forbidden by law, owing to the nuisance and damage to shipping. It was officially certified by the investigators of the Beef Trust that their profit lay in the by-products, which were useless in small quantities, but valuable when aggregated and handled with scientific skill. With these precedents it is not fair to doubt Mr. Norris's statements on the ground that if there were such wastes self-interest would impel the papermakers to seek handsome profits by ending them.

The papermakers in this State were not so impelled, but were involuntarily driven into profitable economies by the gentlemen who were seeking to lessen the pollution of the streams into which the alleged wastes were emptied. Mr. Edward Hatch employed experts who found that of 100 tons of wood only forty were manufactured, and sixty were emptied into the rivers in the form of acids, alkalies, and resins. His expert found that this refuse could be made into a valuable roadmaking material, and then found a market for that product. Another use for this formerly noxious waste was for core castings in foundries. The Rogers pulp mills of Ausable Forks erected a $60,000 plant to deal with this nuisance, and found profit in doing so, the demand for the "waste" exceeding the supply. This by-product of the fight against the pollution of the rivers of this State ought to afford a valuable hint on a National scale. The papermakers ought to be able to do better for themselves than was done for them. Perhaps one way of encouraging them would be to start a National campaign for the purification of the rivers of the Nation, and direct it into the course which it took in New York.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Opposition That Is Unintelligent.

Though the bill of the National Highways Protective Society has not yet been put in final shape for presentation at Albany, its main provisions have been settled, and they all seem to be commendable. They include an examination as to competency before a license is issued to amateur or professional chauffeurs, the placing of the holder's photograph on every license to make his identification easy and certain, the suspension or abrogation of licenses for cause, and a raising of speed limits proportioned to the driver's increased responsibility for any harm he does.

Excellent as all these changes from the existing system of regulation, with its arbitrary and absurdly low speed limits, are from the standpoint of public rights and public safety, they have excited opposition for the one poor reason that they will somewhat interfere with the rapid sale of automobiles, and the Allds-Hamm bill, vetoed for good cause last year by Gov. Hughes, has been revived, with slight amendments, in the hope of dividing the support which the Protective Society's bill would naturally receive. It can not and need not be denied that the latter bill, by restricting the driving of automobiles to those of demonstrated competency, would tend to delay the purchase of not a few machines, and possibly it would prevent a few sales to people unwilling to take the trouble to learn the art of running them instead of trusting to luck and courage. This in the end, however, would be an advantage, not an injury, to the automobile trade, and if its representatives were able to see beyond the immediate dollar their lobbyists would be working for the society's bill instead of against it.

The safer and the less offensive automobiling can be made the freer will it be from restrictions applied to all, but necessary only for the suppression and punishment of the reckless and the unskillful. Nobody cares how fast an automobile runs if in the running due regard is paid to the highway rights of people on foot and in carriages. No speed restrictions at all would ever have been imposed had it not been for the "scorcher," and they will all be removed as soon as the "scorcher" ceases to exist. The society's bill will at least reduce his numbers to a minimum, and opposition to it is therefore as shortsighted as it is wrong.

Fortunes at the Foot of Rainbows.

It is truly pathetic that "eminent lawyers" should have been able to persuade a lot of people out in Western Pennsylvania to organize as the heirs of Sir Francis Drake and begin efforts to secure "a fortune of $2,000,000 now in litigation in the British Chancery Courts."

Of course there is no such fortune. Elaborate assurances to that effect have been given again and again by both British and American officials, and anybody who at this late date does not know that efforts like those making by the so-called Drake heirs are doomed to failure is in really desperate need of a "guardeen," as the New Englanders say. Beyond any question at all they are throwing their money away.

Indeed, they are doing worse with it, for money literally thrown away would not cause any such foolish waste of time or breed the bitterness that comes from high hopes long nourished only to be cruelly disappointed in the end. But people who won't be warned must learn from experience. The huge fortune lying unclaimed in the British Court of Chancery, the treasure of Capt. Kidd, and the valise full of bank notes which a Spanish prisoner is eager to give away are all of equal value—which is none at all.

The Pennsylvanian Drakes ought to consult some lawyers less eminent than those whom they have now employed. They would learn some strange things if they did—strange to the Pennsylvanian Drakes, that is.

Judges Who Ought to Explain.

That was indeed a pertinent question, asked by the correspondent who wrote about the recent awarding of the second prize in a school competition to a boy who, instead of writing a story of his own invention, adopted the simpler method of copying from an old magazine and turning in to the judges one by that able and eminent romancer, Mr. O. Henry. What the inquirer wanted to know was if it could be possible that the New York public schools contain even one boy able to produce a piece of fiction superior to that evolved by a writer as experienced and as deservedly admired as is Mr. Henry.

It would be safe to say off-hand that no such boy exists, for literature is the one art in which precocity is practically unknown—the one art where everybody begins with failure. Of course, the first book of not a few authors—though not of many—has been a success, but rarely indeed have first books that were also successful been the first written as well as the first published productions of their authors. The capacity to learn how to write well is a transmissible quality, but the ability to do so is not. Everybody has to acquire that ability by hard work, long continued, and though many a boy can write what can justly be called "good compositions," they are invariably good only when the critic takes into account the writer's inexperience and his lack of anything to say.

Therefore are the judges who awarded the second prize to that young plagiarist put in a most embarrassing position—that of defending an obviously and necessarily wrong decision. Apparently they know a good story when they see it, else would they not have awarded the second prize as they did, but really there must be something seriously the matter with their estimate of relative values. If they were kind they would let us, and the rest of an interested fraction of the world, know in what respect they considered the first prize boy's story better than the one by Mr. Henry.

HOUSEKEEPER PROBLEM.

Story of a Woman Who Tried to Find a Position.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I read with much interest the letters from "Retired Doctor" and "Widower," and I sympathize most heartily with any one who finds himself or herself in a similar position. I would like to tell of my own experience and that of several of my friends in trying to find a position as housekeeper, not servant, in respectable places.

I have advertised in respectable papers times without number, and either received no reply at all or such a one as would bring the blush of shame to a self-respecting woman, tinged with indignation.

I have visited numerous first-class agencies, so-called, and the first question I was asked was: "What New York experience have you had?" Having been in the city but a few years, and never having been forced to look for a position before, I honestly answered "None," but have had over twenty-five years' experience in my own home in the capacity of cook, housekeeper, laundress, (when the occasion required,) seamstress, nurse, (night and day,) hostess, expert accountant, (decidedly expert,) and general packhorse, but was told it was absolutely impossible for them to do a thing for me, and they refused my registry fee, saying I must have "New York experience," and no amount of persuasion would change their attitude. I asked how I was to have New York experience if no one would give me a trial. They reiterated most emphatically it made no difference to them, my case was hopeless.

I reminded them of the same fact, both these worthy gentlemen are so bitterly lamenting, that it made no difference how dissolute, dishonest, incompetent, intemperate, or slipshod a cook, laundress, waitress, or maid might be, she could step into the homes of the best families without question, apparently, and be received with open arms and hero worship, while a decent, honest, conscientious, respectable woman would be turned away without the shadow of a trial and scant courtesy; so it is small wonder people set up such a cry of despair and flock to hotels and restaurants to live instead of trying to maintain a home. There is a crying need for reform in this direction, and will some one kindly rise and explain why such conditions exist and what is the remedy, if any?

THE UNDERFED CHILD.

A Problem for the Home and Not for the State.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As I had been under the impression that Supt. Maxwell was opposed to the feeding of children in the public schools, I read this morning with a feeling little short of alarm his recommendation that the Board of Education of New York City meet the problem of the undernourished child in this manner.

The policy seems to be one which contains the greatest possible menace to all that is most fundamental to human relations, most regulative of human conduct, and most essential to the development of a better and higher civilization. Before our American cities adopt it one would pray that their responsible citizens pause and inquire whether the proposed correction of the evil that exists and is now so strongly felt will not create a new evil a hundredfold greater than the old.

What are we doing when we undermine the home and cause dissolution of its ties by relieving parents of their responsibility for the physical welfare of their children? Once destroy a powerful and saving instinct and how can we ever replace it by any policies or machinery at our command?

Now, the problem of the underfed child is certainly an acute one and must receive instant recognition and treatment. But are we after the readiest and apparently most obvious or after the most logical and the most searching solution of it? If it is the latter kind that we want, we shall inquire regarding the cause of the evil. And what has careful investigation shown to be the chief cause of the bad physical condition of the child? Simply ignorance of the parents. Not poverty, not indifference, not mental incapacity, not absence of parental love; only ignorance.

I am happy to say that in Newark we are attacking our problem by going to the root of the matter and instructing our mothers in the proper care of their homes and the right feeding of their children. Sentiment here is strong against any other policy, and almost every philanthropic society in the city is interested in advancing this rational plan.

Of course it will be urged that many mothers are obliged to work and cannot give their children proper care at home. But this is not a normal condition, and a general public policy should not be determined by it. It should be taken up as a distinct and separate problem and met by a solution which does not confuse several sets of conditions and of causes.

The rallying cry of social workers to-day is, "Save the home!" But insight must go deeper than merely into the fact that institutional life is but a poor makeshift and that in its atmosphere the child cannot thrive. It must grasp the necessity of preserving and reinforcing those instincts which evolved the home and whose combined vitality alone can save it.

PRINCETON'S GRADUATE COLLEGE

Issues a Denial of Intent to Make It Exclusive.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As Chairman of the Committee on the Graduate School of Princeton University, I beg to call your attention to the editorial article in your issue of this morning, which is evidently based on a misunderstanding of facts. It sets forth that there is a desire to found an "exclusive residential college" at Princeton under the "exclusive and benumbing touch" of "special privilege."

This could not be more falsely stated. The reverse is absolutely the fact. It is Mr. Proctor's wish to have his half million dollars go mainly toward the endowment of professorships and fellowships. This is the unanimous desire of all connected with the Graduate College. There is not the slightest intention to make it in any way exclusive. The buildings are intended to be large enough to accommodate all the graduate students who may desire to live there, and, in any event, residence there is to be based only upon maintenance of a strict standard of scholarship. It is our belief that such a residential college will do more to promote a broad, democratic, community life, than anything yet attempted along educational lines in this country. Nothing is further from Mr. Proctor's mind, or from the wishes of the officers of the Graduate College, than the ideals imputed in your editorial article to those who are in favor of accepting the gift.

EVILS OF MONOPOLIES.

Ex-Senator Edmunds Indorses Mr. Howland's Views on Cause and Remedy.

In reply to a letter from Mr. Charles P. Howland of this city, inclosing an article upon "Monopolies: The Cause and the Remedy," which Mr. Howland has contributed to the Columbia Law Review for February, ex-Senator George F. Edmunds has written the following letter:

Aiken, S. C., Feb. 1, 1910.

Dear Sir: Yours of the 28th ult., with copy of the proof of your article for the Columbia Law Review on "Monopolies: The Cause and the Remedy," was duly received. I have read the article with much pleasure. You have given the subject profound and exhaustive examination, and have treated it very philosophically. I am sure its publication will be of great benefit to the great mass of intelligent and patriotic citizens, so many of whom do not have the time or opportunity to look at the fundamental secrets and origins of public evils.

I entirely agree with you that it is perfectly possible for the several States and the United States, by co-ordinate action, to destroy the existing and prevent threatened evils without any amendment of the United States Constitution. If some State, here and there, should, either through ignorance or indifference, fail to co-operate no great harm will be done except to herself, for, of course, no one State can give its corporations any power outside of her own jurisdiction, to be exercised other than in such way as the other State or States may choose to permit.

My conviction is and has been that the great expansion of the so-called trusts and other combinations of vast masses of capital, destructive in one direction and monopolistic in another and consequent direction, has, since the enactment of the so-called Sherman law, grown and thriven because the law for many years after its passage was left by successive Administrations almost entirely in a condition of what the late President Cleveland would have called a state of "innocuous desuetude." The unhappy fact was, I fear, that the Administrations in power, for more than one term succeeding the passage of the act, had not much sympathy with its provisions and purpose, and perhaps it ought to be said that Congress was not sufficiently awake to the great importance of putting it in effective and untiring force by furnishing the money necessary to carry it extensively into effect and to bring everywhere throughout the Republic the force of administrative and judicial proceedings for the prevention and punishment of its violations into full exercise. In the first case under the law that I call to mind (that of Knight) it was remarked by gentlemen of the bar of the Supreme Court in discussing the opinion that the man who framed the bill in that case failed to state obviously essential and easily proved facts either from gross want of knowledge of law and pleading, or else, having that knowledge, he, for some strange reason, failed to use it.

The statute of July 2, 1890, except, perhaps, its title, was not framed by Mr. Sherman or by any member of the Senate Finance Committee that reported it. As reported, it was, after some destructive debate, referred to the Committee on the Judiciary, when all after the enacting clause was stricken out and an entirely different series of provisions was inserted as a result of most careful discussion and consideration. These provisions were put in the very form in which they now stand in the statute by one of the members of that committee, and agreed upon unanimously by it, and so reported to the Senate. The act was not intended to be an administrative act in any sense, but it was intended to provide, in broad and all-embracing language, for the prevention and punishment of restraint of trade with foreign nations and among the several States in whatever form that restraint could be exercised.

It appeared to the committee that Congress could go no further in that direction in that branch of the general subject.

I do not remember in what connection the words of mine you have done me the honor to quote were said, but I believe that they did not overstate the truth.

A few weeks ago, in replying to a letter of Senator Dillingham of Vermont, I expressed my views upon the subject very positively, though briefly. I think he will before long in some way make them public.

You are quite at liberty to make use of this note or any part of it that you may think proper. Very truly yours,

GEORGE F. EDMUNDS.

The Tips Expected.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I don't know what object the waiters have in belittling their earnings, but many of them do make good money. At one hotel they are insulted if they get less than 50 cents, and a free spender gives them from $1 to $5.

I had the idea that the accepted tip was 10 per cent. on the dollar, but let any one order $1 worth and offer the waiter 10 cents. He will give you a withering look, and tell the other waiters how contemptibly mean you are. A waiter showed his displeasure the other night when given 25 cents for 60 cents' worth of food served for two. Another was insolent to my wife and a friend, who asked for a card; said there were none; "he could tell them what they had." There were cards on some of the tables, but this waiter thought there was nothing in it.

It is really an outrage that we have to tip some one for serving us the food we pay for. Why not tip every salesman and salesgirl for handing us the goods we pay for?

THE RETURN FROM ELBA.

He is coming back from Elba,
From that far off tropic shore,
Where the lyre-bird is singing
And where only lions roar.
He went for big game only,
Where the forest monsters roam,
Yet at no time quite forgetting
There was bigger game at home.

REFRAIN.

He is coming back from Elba
With his sword and mouth and pen,
And you bet, on his arrival,
There'll be something doing then.

There's a red fox in the Senate,
There's a gray one in the House,
There's a porcupine in Kansas,
And a California mouse;
There's a wild cat in Wisconsin,
Indiana holds a jug
That is showing signs of bursting
With a local option bug;
There's a rabbit in Kentucky,
In Ohio there are rats,
And the Illinois belfry
Is overrun with bats;
There's a 'possum in the White House,
With a cat and dog all 'round,
And a Democratic donkey

DR. FLEXNER FLAYS ANTIVIVISECTIONISTS

"ENEMIES OF MANKIND"

Quotes Mrs. Diana Belais's Words Inveighing Against Serum Therapy and the Germ Theory of Disease.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

You are doubtless aware that the New York Anti-Vivisection Society is engaged, at the present time, in urging upon the people and Legislature of this State restrictive legislation, the alleged purpose of which is merely to regulate the practice of animal experimentation. On account of the bearing of this agitation upon the welfare of the people of the State, I feel that they should be clearly informed of the real purposes of the society which is responsible for it. In order to place the issue accurately before the public, I have undertaken to present the views, publicly expressed and widely printed, held upon some vital medical questions by the President of the society and to comment briefly upon them.

In an address delivered in London and published in The New York Herald of July 8, 1909, the President, Mrs. Diana Belais, says:

"What is the way of salvation? It seems to me that the only real way to freedom not only for the sub-human but for the human as well lies in getting away from the unfortunate and mistaken idea of the germ theory of disease, with its filthy inoculations of poison into healthy blood and tissue. Fundamentally, I believe our work and our battle are there.

"The insanity of serum therapy is increasing so rapidly that soon no one will be safe from the infection of any and every kind of disease; the blood of the children will be impure from the hour of their birth, and a certain sure retrogression of the race is bound to follow, since all these results from serum therapy are cumulative * * * and we have reached the natural but inevitable result of blood pollution by serum therapy, i. e., a degenerated race."

In other words, the New York Anti-Vivisection Society has enrolled itself with those enemies of mankind, and, indeed, the animal kingdom in general, who are opposed to vaccination and hence would bring back into the civilized world the unchecked ravages of smallpox; who do not consider it an achievement of the first importance to have diminished by three-fourths the death rate from diphtheria and to have transformed one of the most dreaded diseases into one of the most readily controlled; who would not mind were cerebro-spinal meningitis to continue to hold its victims alive for months under such conditions of deformity and suffering as no pen can adequately describe; who choose to disregard the conquest over malaria and yellow fever; and who prefer to see the bubonic plague and other diseases grow and extend their ravages, rather than believe that germs produce disease.

The pretense has been made in the past and is still being made that the object of restrictive legislation is to confine the employment of animals for experiments to qualified and expert persons. Setting aside the implied proposition, which has never been proved, that unqualified and inexpert persons do now engage in such experimentation, the hollowness of the pretense is exposed by the recent attempt made by the New York Anti-Vivisection Society to discredit the work of the Rockefeller Institute, which has on its staff only qualified scientific workers. But the real intent of the society to impede and ultimately to abolish all experiments upon animals is shown by the following quotation from the same address:

"As to our legislative activities, we have taken as the primal and practically only plank in our legislative platform that of 'The Open Door.' The open door, with inspection. Inspection not by the medical fraternity but by appointees named by the humane and anti-vivisection societies and approved by the Board of Regents."

In view of the fact that there has never been any "closed door" in laboratories, it is not clear, beyond its mere catchiness, why so much stress is placed upon the phrase "The Open Door," but it is obvious that the avowed purpose of employing, under legal sanction, as inspectors of a class of superior and highly-trained scientific men, working with and for the benefits of the community, utterly unqualified and hostile persons, exhibits a motive so sinister that an intelligent public, once it is informed, will not readily be deceived by it.

The State of New York and several of its municipalities have appropriated funds for and erected laboratories in which are maintained a corps of workers, so that the citizens of the State may be provided with the most recent and exact methods of diagnosis of disease, which sometimes imply the use of animals, and that they may be supplied with vaccine, diphtheria and tetanus (lock-jaw) anti-toxins and other serums, in the production of which animals are required. The New York Anti-Vivisection Society strikes at these interests of the citizens of the State of New York quite as definitely and directly as at the progress of medicine through scientific discovery, and the effectiveness of teaching, by means of demonstrations of important facts in physiology and pathology.

As a final word, I should like to add that never in the history of mankind has medicine not been an experimental calling. Formerly, however, the experiments were conducted on a vast scale on ill human beings, painfully conscious, and with a rate of progress in knowledge that was slow and discouraging. To-day, on the other hand, the experiments are made upon animals, unconscious through anaesthesia, and with a degree of success and rapidity of progress in knowledge which gives to this age the distinction of being the foremost and most beneficent in all the history of medicine.

MORE PRAISE FOR PULSE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The letter "In Praise of Pulse" in The Times, by Walter Beverley Crane, is wholly sane and intelligent. The topic merits a lyric enthusiasm. Dr. O. W. Holmes wrote that "Rhetoric is born of the beans of Beverley." Hypatia's sublime brain was nourished on lentils. Why use one's bodily temple as a sepulchre for corpses when the cleaner and more "wireless" foods are cheaper and more hygienic?

Apropos of this, can we not have published a list of restaurants furnishing a good table d'hote dinner of a bloodless and lardless character? Surely such places would be well patronized here, as in London, where there are over fifty flourishing cafes following the intelligent dietary of Count Rumford which delivered Munich from beggary. We need a Count Rumford in America to supplant the false advisers of the people in the present crisis.

ALDERMEN INSINCERE THEATRE MAN SAYS

Burnham Declares After Yesterday's Hearing They Don't Want to Stop Sidewalk Speculating.

SPECULATORS WANT LICENSE

Say It Will Drive Out Riffraff—Managers Said to be in League with Speculators.

The long-discussed question of what the city shall do with the sidewalk theatre ticket speculator was fought all over again by the Aldermen yesterday afternoon, when the Committee on Laws and Legislation held a public hearing on the ordinances proposed by Aldermen Schloss, Dowling, Becker, and Johnson. Mr. Becker withdrew his ordinance before the hearing began, and the debate was on the one proposed by Alderman Schloss of Abe Gruber's district, which provided that the speculators be forced out of business entirely, and on Alderman Dowling's providing for a five-hundred-dollar a year license and a two-thousand-dollar bond.

Theatrical managers, sidewalk and agency speculators, and the general public were represented, but by far the hardest fight was put up by the sidewalk men against the Schloss ordinance. For the most part, the sidewalk men thought the high-license proposal would be the best plan, although others maintained that such a method would simply mean the creation of a speculators' trust, which would force prices up without benefiting in any way the public at large.

Says Aldermen Aren't Sincere.

Before the hearing was half over Charles Burnham, President of the Theatrical Managers' Association, representing the theatrical managers, left the chamber, avowing that the Aldermen were not sincere and that the Schloss ordinance stood no chance of being put through. The hearing was adjourned until next Thursday at 1 P. M. Alderman Levine is Chairman of the committee, and the other members are Aldermen McCann, Reardon, Delaney, Marx, Campbell, Finnigan, Meagher, Cornell, Downing, and Gunther.

C. F. Guyon, the first speaker, said he was a merchant who had grown tired of being insulted by sidewalk speculators.

"Last night," he said, "eleven theatres had sixty speculators in front of them and ten policemen unsuccessfully trying to keep order. If the managers wish the hotel agencies to sell their tickets, let them pay them a commission, and not split with them the extra money they make the public pay."

Michel J. Moran, a lawyer of 271 Broadway had strong language for the speculators.

"I believe in licensing any legitimate occupation," he said, "but this business is an extortion. When I asked the sphinx-like person in the box office once for a ticket he informed me that he had none to sell. The vultures outside, however, had plenty. Our women should be protected from insults. We can get along without the speculators and without being blackjacked into buying our theatre tickets."

The Speculator Deplores Ordinance.

George A. Duncan, President of the Theatrical Ticket Speculators' Association, said he was one of the "social highwaymen and gumshoe workers" that indulged in ticket speculating. He said he deplored the fact that the action of the Corporation Counsel last year in announcing that the ordinance passed by the Aldermen and signed by the Mayor was unconstitutional, had resulted in filling the ranks of the speculators with riffraff and unscrupulous persons. He said he was in favor of a high license fee, as it would tend to keep the business among a few reputable men. He said the theatrical managers were in league with the agencies in hotels, and the sidewalk men sometimes bought tickets from the latter at a high price. Thomas J. McBride, who owns a number of ticket agencies in the hotels throughout the city, denied this. He said he had never sold a ticket to a speculator. Mr. Duncan said the agreement between the theatrical managers and the agencies was that the latter could sell tickets at a fifty-cent increase, half of it to be returned to the managers. Unsold tickets sold by the agencies were returned to the box office, but unsold tickets bought by street speculators, he said, were a dead loss.

A. Marks, a ticket agent, said he always purchased his tickets from the box office as a speculation, for he had no means of determining what kind of show it was. The one solution of the trouble, he maintained, was to pass the Dowling ordinance. A $600 fee and a $3,000 bond was still better, he thought.

Another speculator named Slater said that a large license fee would simply mean that the business would be kept among a few speculators, who would drive the poorer men out of business. He said he knew all about the collusion between managers and speculators, and if he were pressed he would tell some unwelcome truths. When Chairman Levine pressed him to tell all he knew, he said it would mean the ruin of his family.

"The small fry do not want the big license fee," he said. "It is only the big fellows who do and who will sandbag the public into paying $6 or $8 or $10 for a ticket."

Another speculator named Beebe said he knew of a combination of five speculators who are in league with prominent Broadway managers. Fully 90 per cent. of the managers, he said, worked with the speculators. When the managers had a big success they asked for bids on the best seats from the combination of five speculators. The combination even controls the fifty-cent seats in some houses, he said.

President Burnham, after he had left the chamber in disgust, said:

"The only way to regulate this speculating business is to do away with it altogether. A high license won't do it. The theatrical managers are becoming disgusted at the way the Aldermen handle this matter. They never do anything to abate the nuisance."

Society to Present "The Debutante."

The Sima Kappa Sigma Society, composed of the alumni of the Classical School for Girls, with the assistance of eight of their college graduate brothers, will present next Monday at the Berkeley Lyceum Theatre a musical comedy of New York society life, entitled "The Débutante." The book and music are by John Stanley Crandell. The cast includes Miss Scoville, Miss Lewis, Miss Herrmann, Miss Stickney, Miss Taylor, Miss Perry, Miss Halsey, Mrs. Hillman, Miss Jenvey, Mr. Scofield, Mr. Scott, Mr. Backus, Mr. Smith, Mr. Hawley, Mr. Huyler, and Mr. Ayres.

"Tristan" at the Metropolitan.

John Mason Appears in a Crude and Tedious Play by Ernest Poole.

NONE SO BLIND, a play in four acts, by Ernest Poole. Hackett Theater.

John Howe	John Mason
Anne Howe	Mabel Roebuck
Betsy Howe	Ivy Troutman
Billy Locklin	Thomas P. Jackson
Richard Rennels	Thomas MacLarnie
Frank Knowlton	Walter Hale

In "None So Blind," produced at the Hackett Theatre last evening, Mr. John Mason, an admirable actor, labors hard to bring interest to a play and a rôle which show throughout the marks of the novice and which may be dismissed, therefore, in a brief account.

Mr. Poole, the author, has tried to project the relationships and the misunderstandings in a household where the husband is a practical man of affairs—a bridge builder by profession—while his wife has literary aspirations which she yearns to gratify. For a long time devotion to her husband's interests has served to deny her this satisfaction. He has become blind, and it is necessary for her to work with him day and night on the plans and specifications for a bridge which he is building in Colorado. The husband, unknown to his wife, regains his sight in time to discover that a visitor from New York, an old friend of the wife's, has been helping her with the writing of her book, has placed it with a publisher, and has succeeded in awakening in her a desire to return to the East. The husband conceals the fact that he can see, but though supposedly blind discovers other things, one of them being the fact that his sister has unwittingly assisted a rival engineer in a scheme to steal the plans and substitute for them others which will discredit the bridge builder in the eyes of his employers. This latter turn of the plot, an extremely improbable and awkwardly handled proposition, eventuates in nothing very interesting, but the climax of the third act, in which the engineer finally reveals to his wife the fact that he can see, provides a momentary opportunity for a powerfully delivered speech which Mr. Mason makes the most of.

In the final act, showing the top of the mountains at dawn, a pretty rose-colored picture, the engineer, lonely, but still rejoicing in his strength, is sought out by his wife, who tells him that the erstwhile serpent in their Eden has gone back home alone. In future she knows that her husband will have a better understanding of her ambitions, and as they both love each other, she is sure that happiness will follow. He appears to be satisfied with her finding in the matter and enfolds her in his arms, and one earnestly hopes that thereafter the various details of his mechanical employment will be intrusted to other hands than hers. She has certainly been entitled to some sympathy.

The play is crude, long drawn out, and almost everything is obvious from the start.

Mr. Mason does all that is possible under the circumstances, and he has good assistance from Miss Mabel Roebuck and Miss Ivy Troutman. The others do well enough, but no remarkable eyesight is needed to see the early end of "None So Blind." Further comment, therefore, would be superfluous.

Marie Lloyd to Arrive To-day.

Marie Lloyd, the English music hall singer, who has made several vaudeville tours of this country, is on board the Mauretania, due to arrive in New York to-day. Miss Lloyd, accompanied by her sister, Annie, is coming principally on a pleasure trip, without any contracts, unless she has made some by wireless. Some vaudeville managers have been trying to reach her in that way. Miss Lloyd's specialty is the singing of character songs, like those her younger sister, Alice, made popular here. On the same steamer with her is Alfred Butt, Managing Director of the Palace Theatre, London, who is coming to the United States in search of novelties for his and other London theatres.

PROF. F. A. FOWLER DEAD.

Well-Known Church Organist a Victim of Blood Poisoning.

Prof. Frederick A. Fowler, one of the best-known church organists of the East, died Wednesday night at his apartment, 103 West Eighty-eighth Street, from blood poisoning. The poisoning was due to a slight cause.

Prof. Fowler was 60 years old. He was born in New Haven, Conn., and studied music under the late Prof. Gustave Stoeckel of Yale. He was organist at St. Paul's and St. Thomas's Episcopal Churches of New Haven, and later in the Rutgers Presbyterian Church, this city. For the last six years he had been organist of the Park Presbyterian Church. He was a mechanical genius in the line of musical construction, and several of his inventions are in use in large organ factories.

He organized and conducted for several years the Amphion Singing Society of New Haven, a chorus of sixty voices, which was perhaps the best known in Connecticut. He left a widow and two children.

'CHANTECLER' HALTS, RAT ACTOR BANISHED

Will Not Bite Leg of Guinea Hen and Rostand Is to Rewrite Third Act.

WRITTEN UNDER EVIL STAR?

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Feb. 3.—A rat will not bite the leg of a guinea hen in the third act of Rostand's feathery play, for the rat has been banished and the entire third act is to be rewritten. Rostand declared at midnight Wednesday after a rehearsal that the act was much too heavy. His despairing associates, Hertz and Coquelin, were obliged to submit to his dictum, and the story of defective electric lighting was then invented as an excuse to give to the public.

It is almost certain now that owing to rehearsals of general changes the play cannot be produced on Saturday. The idea is spreading that the piece is conceived under an evil star and is destined to endless ill luck. People who have bought seats for the premiere and even those who hold invitations complain loudly that for several weeks "Chantecler" has held up all their social plans, and they cannot even accept invitations to dinner without running the risk of forfeiting their dearly sought right to witness the first performance.

To mention "Chantecler" anywhere now is invariably to provoke a shrug of the shoulders. The much-vaunted rooster has at last gotten on the nerves of Boulevardiers.

TO PRODUCE AMERICAN OPERA.

Metropolitan to Give "The Pipe of Desire," with American Singers.

The Metropolitan Opera Company is about to keep two promises it had made for the present season, that is, to produce not only a work in English, but a work by an American composer. The next novelty to be offered at the Metropolitan after "L'Attaque du Moulin" will be, it is probable, Frederick Converse's "The Pipe of Desire."

Alfred Hertz will conduct this work, which will, of course, be sung by American singers. It is possible that Mme. Mariska-Aldrich may make her first appearance of the season in this opera.

Frohman to Star Donald Brian.

Charles Frohman has signed a special contract with Donald Brian, who is now playing Freddy Smythe in "The Dollar Princess," by which Mr. Brian is to be starred in a new musical piece at the end of next season, and later is to appear in a drama by Augustus Thomas. Mr. Frohman has also arranged for Sir Arthur Pinero's next play, for production either in America or England.

200 Ministers See "The Watcher."

The special clergymen's matinée of "The Watcher," at the Comedy Theatre yesterday afternoon was attended by about 200 ministers and their families. The boxes were occupied by prominent actors, including Forbes-Robertson, Maxine Elliott, Cyril Scott, Walter Hampden, Tully Marshall, Mabel Barrison, and George Fawcett. Marion Fairfax, a dramatist, and the Rev. Thomas Dixon, novelist and dramatic writer, were also special guests of the management. John Emerson, stage director of the company, made a brief speech at the end of the third act, asking the clergymen present to write their opinions of the play. A number responded. After the performance Cora Maynard, author of the play, held an informal reception on the stage.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

After a brief rest in New York Mrs. Fiske resumed her tour in "Salvation Nell" last night at the Academy of Music, Reading, Penn. During the month she will play engagements in the cities which were canceled on account of her illness.

James Young will give two lectures at the Berkeley Lyceum Theatre complimentary to the club women and public school teachers of New York this week. The first, this afternoon, will be on the subject, "A Rational View of Hamlet," and the other, to-morrow morning at 11:30 o'clock, will be on "A Defense of Shylock."

Marceline, the clown at the Hippodrome, will celebrate a birthday on Saturday, Feb. 10. The children in the audience at the matinee performance will be invited on the stage to meet him, and will be permitted to guess how old he is. The first three who guess nearest right will secure prizes.

Samuel W. Gumperts, general manager of Dreamland, Coney Island, returned to New York yesterday on the Adriatic of the White Star Line, after two months abroad. Mr. Gumperts traveled through Europe and the North of Africa, looking for novelties for Dreamland and the pier at Long Branch.

Marriage and death notices intended for insertion in The New York Times may be telephoned to 1000 Bryant.

C. W. SAVAGE, Oberlin.

The Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee will meet in this city this morning for its annual session. As a prominent player remarked yesterday, nobody knows just yet whether it will sit as a coroner's jury or as a board of consulting surgeons. Nor, he added, can it be known which rôle the committee has played until the game as they finally decide it shall be played has been thoroughly tried out during the next two or three seasons.

Without going into details in the matter, one of the rule makers who arrived yesterday said that he believed that increasing the distance to be gained in three tries from ten to fifteen yards would provide the needed opening of the game. Particularly would this be true, he thought, if the forward pass were retained and proper provision made for assisting the defensive tackles at whom the bulk of the attack is now aimed. This might be supplied by a rule compelling a certain number of the secondary defense to remain within five yards of the line with a corresponding weakening of the open attack to offset this.

Certainly this meeting is being looked forward to as the most important of all the yearly gatherings that the committee has ever held. Not even the famous session of 1904, when the present rules—deemed at the time to be extremely "radical"—were adopted in answer to the general demand for an open game, exceeded in interest and importance the one which commences to-night."

Schoolboys and collegians all over the country are awaiting the committee's decisions with considerable anxiety. This anxiety is not untinged with fear, both that the virility of the game may be lost because of the extremely vigorous criticism it has received in the past three months and that not enough will be done to save it for future football generations.

Faculties of preparatory schools and universities are also eager to see what is done, most of them with the friendliest feeling, but some looking askance at all attempts to "reform" football.

It would seem an easy thing simply to rid the game of the forward pass in order to restore to it the old secondary defense line-up. But there is one great thing militating against doing this, and that is public opinion. The forward pass and the open game it provides have met with popular favor and the retention of the forward pass is demanded on all sides.

The problem then is to strengthen the defense at the tackle position, where most of the serious injuries of the past two years have occurred, at the same time that the present open game enjoyed by both players and spectators is conserved. It was the opinion of one of the rule makers in town last night that this could be accomplished in at least one sure way, that of limiting the number of men in the defense backfield who were permitted further than five yards from the line of scrimmage.

WESTERN COACHES' VIEWS.

A. A. Stagg and Dr. Williams Talk on Football Revision.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—Before Coach A. A. Stagg of the University of Chicago left for New York this morning to attend the meetings of the football Rules Committee he announced that he had heard from football officials of many States, all of whom want rules that will lessen the liability of players to serious accidents and deaths.

Stagg's pet suggestion at the New York sessions will be regarding the forward pass. He will seek to have the rules surrounding this play changed in such a way as to make the pass more popular.

"The real reason the forward pass seems to have increased the number of injuries is that it has been tampered with too much," he said. "The rules for the last two years necessitate playing the men in such a way as to leave the tackles unprotected and thus invite mass play, the real cause of injuries."

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—The abolition of the "kick-off" and the adoption of rules minimizing the deadly tackles caused by the open game are the innovations in the football code fostered by Dr. H. L. Williams, athletic director of the University of Minnesota, in a statement made here to-day. Dr. Williams stopped off here on his way to New York to attend the meeting of the football Rules Committee.

Dr. Williams took a decided stand against open field tackling, which has been greatly increased under the new rules. He offered several changes in the rules governing this particular part of the gridiron code. The Minnesota director deplored the dangers resultant upon the diving tackle, the low tackle, and the lack of protection for a man catching punts in the open field.

Dr. Williams suggested no innovations in the general plan of play, and is apparently satisfied with the game as it stands with the adoption of a few more safeguards to prevent injuries in tackling. He added the suggestion that the old style Rugby game, which has been mentioned as the possible successor, contains far more dangers than the present style.

IMPORTANT TENNIS CHANGES.

National Association to Decide Vital Points at To-night's Meeting.

The decisions of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association at its annual meeting in this city to-night, on the question of a National clay court championship and a new system of voting, are eagerly awaited by the real enthusiasts of the game.

While the chief controversy surrounds the foregoing subjects, the programme will also include an effort to place this country on record as against playing one team in the preliminary tie matches for the Davis International Challenge Cup and sending another team to Australia. Many consider such a proceeding unsportsmanlike. An adequate supervision of tournaments and championships and observance of the rules will also come up for discussion.

A peculiar condition surrounds the effort to put the National clay court championship on the fixture list. The leaders of the West and South are arrayed against the officials of the Executive Committee. The opposing officials hope to put the championship through without designating it as a National meeting. This the West and South will refuse to consider.

LAMY MAKES A CLEAN-UP.

Special to The New York Times.

SARANAC LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 3.—The finals of the international outdoor amateur skating championships to-day resulted in a clean-up for Edmund Lamy, the Saranac Lake skater. Lamy won first place in the 220 yards, half mile, one mile, and three mile races. He gave a remarkable exhibition of his speed in the distance event, lapping the bunch before half the distance was gone, and beating the other competitors to the tape after skating one lap more than the three miles. Lamy's time for the twenty-two laps was 9:51. The timers did not catch his time at the end of the twenty-first lap or a new record would probably have been established. After overtaking the skaters he set such a hot pace that Phil Kearney, the Pittsburg flier, was compelled to give up. Miller of New York beat Wheeler of Montreal in a hard struggle for second place.

The track was slow, owing to a heavy snowstorm, which kept the ice covered, and a stiff northeast wind prevented fast time. The only races taken by outsiders were the half-mile backward event and the boys' race, won by Mason and Logan of Montreal, respectively. The Montreal, New York, and Pittsburg contestants had to be content with seconds and thirds in the championship Class A events. The summaries:

220-Yard Race.—Won by Ed. Lamy; F. J. Robson, second; Phil Kearney, third. Time—0:21 1-5.
Half-Mile Race.—Won by Ed. Lamy; R. L. Wheeler of Montreal, second; Phil Kearney of Pittsburg, third. Time—1:32.
One-Mile Race for Boys Under 16 Years.—Claudius Lamy and Logan tied for first place; Walker, third. Time—3:37 4-5.
One-Mile Race.—Won by Ed. Lamy; R. L. Wheeler of Montreal, second; Joe Miller, third. Time—3:19.
Northern New York Special.—Won by Ernest Lamy; C. Lamy, second; Gowett, third. Time—3:41 2-5.
Half-Mile Backwards.—Won by A. Mason of Montreal; J. C. Parent of Montreal, second; G. Finlayson, third. Time—2:41.
Three Miles.—Final Heat—Won by Ed. Lamy; Miller, second; Wheeler, third. Time—9:51.

The annual meeting of the International Skating Union of America was held here to-day and Alan A. Blanchard of Chicago was elected President; John Harding of Saranac Lake, First Vice President; James A. Taylor of Montreal, Second Vice President; and Fred H. Tucker of Brooklyn, Secretary Treasurer.

The rules governing skating events were revised. Among the important changes was the adoption of a new rule whereby a skater winning an event is to be credited with thirty points, the second man with twenty, and the third with ten. In addition contestants are to be awarded a point for each lap won. A special medal and emblem of championship will be given to the winner of the highest number of points at a meeting.

No Turf Schedule Arranged Yet.

Representatives of the various New York racing associations held another meeting yesterday on the question of racing dates for the coming season, but an adjournment was taken until to-day without any definite schedule being adopted. It has been promised that at the session to-day some agreement will be reached that will be satisfactory to the various applicants for racing time. Those in attendance at the meeting were Schuyler L. Parsons and Francis R. Hitchcock, Coney Island Jockey Club; Philip J. Dwyer, Brooklyn Jockey Club and the Queens County Jockey Club; Andrew Miller, Saratoga Racing Association; W. C. Edwards, Metropolitan Jockey Club; James Butler, Empire City Racing Association, and William A. Engeman, Brighton Beach Racing Association.

NOTES OF THE TURF.

Publication was made yesterday of the nominations for the Futurity of 1912 offered by the Coney Island Jockey Club, entries for which closed Jan. 3. The list shows a total of 548 eligibles, and it contains many close relatives to famous performers.

Robert Boyle recently purchased the steeplechaser Thistledale from J. W. Colt for $1,500 for his son, John Boyle, one of the youngest of turfmen. For the past few seasons Thistledale was the star of Mr. Colt's cross-country stable. Boyle was in New York yesterday making arrangements for the shipment of the horses of M. Kraus to the Benning track of the Washington Jockey Club. He was recently engaged to handle the Kraus horses for the coming season, and they will be shipped to Washington to-morrow.

Robert Neville, who brought the horse, Mr. McCann, to the races and afterward developed the good jumper, Sir Wooster, and some other winners, is very ill at his home in Virginia.

SHEPPARD MAY RUN IN THE IRISH GAMES

Military Athletic League Lifts Suspension for To-morrow Night.

COMPETE UNDER PROTEST

A. A. U. Decides That Suspension Must Be Sustained—Requests Temporary Lifting of the Ban.

It was decided at a meeting of the Athletic Committee of the Military Athletic League yesterday to lift the suspension against Melvin W. Sheppard, who is under charges, so that he could compete in the Irish-American games which will be held to-morrow night in Madison Square Garden. The action was taken so that the public might not be disappointed, as Sheppard has been extensively advertised to compete in a special race against Egan and Harry Gissing. This followed a request of the Irish-American Athletic Club, and the statement of what had been done was received at the Irish-American Club house last night signed by Major Thomas R. Fleming of the Thirteenth Regiment. Aside from the fact that Sheppard will be permitted to compete under protest and his prizes held up pending a final decision in the charges against him, the case remains still in the same light as before.

It was a peculiar coincidence that at practically the same time the Military Athletic League was holding its meeting the Legislation Committee of the A. A. U. decided on the protest of the Irish-American Athletic Club against Sheppard's suspension, that the Amateur Athletic Union could not interfere in the matter and would have to recognize the suspension by the military body. At the same time, however, it was unanimously requested by the committee that the Military Athletic League allow Sheppard to run under protest in any A. A. U. events in which he is already entered. The only events in which he is entered take place to-morrow night at the Irish-American games so that the request was acceded to before it was actually made by the A. A. U. The statement by the Legislation Committee was as follows:

The protest of the Irish-American Athletic Club and Melvin W. Sheppard against the action of the Military Athletic League in suspending Sheppard, which was referred by E. C. Brown, President of the Amateur Athletic Union, to the Legislation Committee of the A. A. U., was considered by that committee at a meeting this afternoon, and the committee also had before it a letter from Major W. A. Turpin, Recording Secretary of the Military Athletic League, dated Feb. 2, 1910, notifying the Secretary of the A. A. U. that Sheppard had been suspended by the Athletic Committee of the Military Athletic League, and after a full consideration of the question it was the unanimous decision of the Legislation Committee under the articles of alliance between the Military Athletic League and the Amateur Athletic Union, the suspension of Melvin W. Sheppard by the Military Athletic League must be recognized by the A. A. U.

In view, however, of the fact that entries of Sheppard for games to be held by clubs of the A. A. U. had been received in good faith, prior to the announcement of such suspension, the Legislation Committee unanimously requests the Military Athletic League to lift the suspension of Sheppard so far as to permit him to compete, under protest, in games held under the auspices of the A. A. U. in events for which his entry had been received prior to the announcement of his suspension, to wit, Feb. 2, it being understood that in all such cases the prizes in any event in which Sheppard wins a place shall be withheld until the final determination of the trial of Sheppard by the Military Athletic League.

DONLIN HAS NOT SIGNED.

Giants' Old Outfielder is Still Outside Baseball Breastworks.

President John T. Brush received another batch of signed contracts from New York players yesterday, and among those who lost no time to accept the terms offered were Pitcher Leon Ames, who is at Warren, Ohio. He will join the squad of Giant players which assembles at St. Louis to go to Marlin Springs near the end of the month.

One of the Giants' recruits, Ernest Lush of Bridgeport, Conn., also sent in his contract. Lush is a promising infielder and a brother of Billy Lush, former outfielder for Cleveland. The youngster was a star football and baseball player at Villanova College, and his brother recommended him to Manager McGraw. He will go to Texas with the team, and McGraw has hopes that he will develop quickly into a major league player. He was a star on a semi-professional aggregation in Bridgeport last Summer. George J. Daley of Buffalo, one of the new pitchers, and Josh De Vore, the outfielder, who is at his home in Indiana, also sent in contracts.

President Brush yesterday denied the rumor that Mike Donlin was likely to come back to the Giants. A contract was sent to Donlin by the management, but he has not signed. The hard-hitting outfielder had a talk a few days ago with Manager John McGraw, but it was said after the conference that baseball was not discussed. Donlin has finished his vaudeville tour and is rehearsing for a musical offering, in which his wife, Mabel Hite, is to star.

Mr. Brush said the situation with Donlin is just where it has stood since Donlin refused to report last season. Mr. Brush says now, as he said when the controversy first arose, that baseball managers cannot afford to pay players as large salaries as theatrical managers pay vaudeville headliners.

The Giants need outfielders who can hit, but it isn't at all probable that they will meet Donlin's salary demand. Donlin is said to have told one of his friends recently that he would like to get back into the game, but not in New York. If he could be appointed playing manager of a National League club, his close friends say that he would probably forsake the stage quickly.

Ball Player in Good Standing Now.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Feb. 3.—Thomas L. Owens, the only ineligible player still in the Tri-State League, was fully reinstated to good standing by the National Baseball Commission in a decision promulgated to-day. The request was granted on condition that Owens pay a fine of $50.

Gissing Wins 440-Yard Handicap.

The feature event of the annual games and reception of Company F, Twenty-second Regiment, last night at the armory, Sixty-eighth Street and Broadway, was the 440-yard handicap, which was won by Harry Gissing from the scratch mark. Gissing went out at the crack of the gun in an attempt to break the armory record for this distance, and dashed through the field, taking the lead after about half the distance had been covered, and continued at a fast clip, breaking the tape in fifty-two seconds with a margin of about twenty-five yards.

The Salome race, in which eight soldiers in uniform traveled over various distances, discarding some part of their uniform, then passing around a huge cannon, and in returning collecting the discarded parts and lining up for inspection, was won by R. Jenkins.

A handicap bicycle race, one mile, four starters, two from scratch and two on the 100-yard mark, was won by W. Buckingham, one of the scratch riders, with H. P. Odell, who had 100 yards, a close second. The summaries:

70-Yard Handicap.—Won by J. Schaeffer, (10 feet;) H. Gissing, (2 feet,) second; R. Jenkins, (4 feet,) third. Time—0:07 4-5.
440-Yard Handicap.—Won by H. Gissing, (scratch;) J. H. O'Brien, (5 yards,) second; S. Greason, (12 yards,) third. Time—0:52.
One and One-Half Mile Handicap.—Won by J. B. McDowell, (25 yards;) J. L. Harris, (75 yards,) second; P. Lorz, (75 yards,) third. Time—7:27 4-5.
One Mile Bicycle Race.—Won by W. Buckingham, (scratch;) H. P. Odell, (100 yards,) second; J. Cox, (scratch,) third. Time—2:35 2-5.

Salome Race.—Won by R. Jenkins; H. Elkan, second; P. L. Odell, third. Time—1:38 3-5.
One Mile Relay Race.—Won by team composed of Elkan, Bostick, Walters, Odell, and Jenkins; team composed of Seamon, Chapman, Gardner, R. Schaeffer, and Harris, second. Time—3:44 2-5.

Tie Hockey Game at West Point.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Feb. 3.—On Lusk reservoir, with the ice so soft that good playing was impossible, the Army hockey team and Springfield Training School played each other to a tie to-day, the final score being 1 goal each. Darkness prevented an additional period being played. Berry surprised the cadets by getting the puck and shooting a pretty goal a few seconds after the game started. A stiffening of the soldiers' defense prevented further scoring, and Harmon in the second period, assisted by good team work, tied the score. During the latter part of the game the visitors were kept almost entirely on the defensive. The line-up:

Army.	Position.	Springfield S.
Wilderick	Goal	Salassa
Miles	Point	Emerson
Clark	Cover point	Smith
Harmon	Rover	Warren
Rosevear	Right wing	Best
Schneider	Centre	Berry

Goals—Berry, Harmon. Referee—Lieut. Russell.

Andy Parker Breaks Arm in Fight.

UTICA, N. Y., Feb. 3.—Andy Parker of New York broke his arm in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round bout with "Fighting Dick" Nelson before the Twenty-eighth Separate Company Athletic Club to-night.

Parker had the better of the go until he over-reached himself in making a pass and struck his arm against Nelson's head. It was not known that his arm was fractured until after the fifth round, when he was forced to give up. "Kid" Murphy of New York had the better of Jimmy Dunn of Amsterdam in the ten-round semi-final bout.

Another Score for "K. O." Brown.

"Knockout" Brown put it all over Willie Beecher at the Long Acre Athletic Club last night in their ten-round bout that went the limit. Beecher showed the strenuousness of the going in his face, which was badly marked at the finish. Beecher showed his best in the fifth round, but he gave all he had in this one bit, and from then on it was all Brown's fight.

ST. NICHOLAS WINS IN CLOSE HOCKEY

K. Gordon Scores Deciding Goal Near End of Game, Beating Crescents.

MATCH ROUGH AND HARD

Player Blake's Left Eye Badly Cut by the Rubber Puck as It is Driven by an Opponent.

The St. Nicholas hockey team had a hard task defeating the Crescent A. C. seven in the Amateur Hockey League match at St. Nicholas Rink last night. The score was 4 to 3, and K. Gordon didn't get the winning goal until the game was nearly at an end. It was a rough, strenuous contest, and the St. Nicholas team had everything its own way in the first half. But when the play began in the second half, the Crescents flashed a well organized attack, which swept the St. Nicks off their skates and they did not recover until the Brooklynites had tied the score 3 to 3. About this time the crowd became frenzied with excitement, and there wasn't a sigh of relief until K. Gordon, receiving the rubber disk from Frazer-Campbell on a pretty pass, shot it between Thomas's shin guards for the count which decided the fray. After that, the Crescents fought desperately to tie the score again, but Feitner, the guardian of St. Nick's goal, stopped about everything that whizzed his way.

Two minutes before the end of the game, Leake shot the puck high and straight toward the Crescent goal. It was coming so swiftly toward Blake's head that he could not duck in time and the hard rubber puck struck him over the left eye, inflicting a deep gash from which the blood poured profusely. Blake left the game and Coach Bill Dobby of the Crescents donned skates and sweater and went into the battle. At times the playing was decidedly wild, and little groups of players were spilled here and there about the ice often. The line-up:

Crescent A. C.	Position.	St. Nicholas.
Thomas	Goal	Feitner
Kennedy	Point	Richards
Liffiton	Cover point	Leake
McDonnell	Rover	K. Gordon
W. Blake, Dobby	Centre	Cornell
Browne	Right wing	Frazer-Campbell

Goals—First half: First for St. Nicholas by Winter in 9:36; second for St. Nicholas by Cornell in 11:05; third for St. Nicholas by K. Gordon in 12:39. Second half: First for Crescent Athletic Club by Scarborough in 2:30; second for Crescent Athletic Club by Browne in 5:31; third for Crescent Athletic Club by Browne in 6:47; fourth for St. Nicholas by K. Gordon in 13:37. Penalties—Frazer-Campbell, 2 minutes; Frazer-Campbell, 3 minutes; Kennedy, 1 minute; Browne, 1 minute; Thomas, 2 minutes. Substitute—Dobby for W. Blake. Referee—William Russell, Hockey Club. Assistant referee—T. C. Britton, Hockey Club. Goal umpires—Robert Strange, New York Athletic Club, and M. H. Tisne, Hockey Club. Timekeepers—George F. Stebbins, Crescent Athletic Club; William Marcus, St. Nicholas. Time of halves—Twenty minutes.

CLINE IS 18.2 CHAMPION.

Philadelphia Billiardist Defeats Demarest by Final Score of 1,500 to 1,379.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—Harry P. Cline of Philadelphia is champion 18.2 billiardist of the world. In the final block of their three nights' match at Orchestra Hall to-night he defeated Calvin Demarest of Chicago, the score of the match being 1,500 points to 1,379. The score in the final block was: Cline, 500; Demarest, 584.

The Chicago boy made a game effort to overcome the lead of more than 200 points which his opponent had secured over him in the first two nights' play, but it was too much, and he fell in defeat. Demarest played brilliantly in spells, while Cline plugged along doggedly and made no big scores. Demarest reeled off 72 for his highest mark, and got several other good counts. The scores:

Cline—5 5 10 0 6 28 1 7 0 2 17 2 0 24 4 6 6 21 11 12 1 34 1 16 12 33 14 0 0 0 1 0 21 2 13 4 0 11 17 30 48 14 22 1 2 15 2 0 1 7—500.

PITTSBURG, Penn., Feb. 3.—It was midnight when Willie Hoppe by a run of 53 points in billiards managed to beat Ora Morningstar out in the second night's play of the 1,500-point match. The score for the night stood Hoppe, 500; Morningstar, 495. The total score for the match is: Hoppe, 1,000; Morningstar, 807. The scores to-night were:

Hoppe—45 2 4 33 0 0 15 15 16 111 4 10 1 99 91 1 0 0 53. Total—500. Average, 26 6-19; high run for night, 111. Total for match, 1,000.

Results of Billiard Matches.

In the handicap billiard match at the Broadway Billiard Academy yesterday C. Edwards, playing 100, defeated R. Vincent, also playing 100, by a total of 100 to 46. The high run for the winner was 17, and Vincent clustered 9 for his best turn at the table. To-night Dr. Borden will play R. Raynolds.

In the Greater New York three-cushion billiard championship at Doyle's Billiard Academy last night William McKay, the holder of the Doyle Cup, defeated Blair by a score of 50 to 39 in a match that extended over ninety-nine innings. To-night the two will play again, and Jerome Keough will referee.

The billiard tournament which has been in progress at the Knickerbocker Academy for some time for the amateur championship of Brooklyn, ended last night, and resulted in a triple tie between Scheidig, Boyd, and St. John. They each won five games and lost two. Last night's game was between C. E. White (275) and C. Scheidig (235,) and resulted in a victory for Scheidig by a score of 235 to 203. Scheidig had an average of 4 43-48, and a high run of 31. White's high run was 28, and his average 4 11-48. The play-off will commence to-night when Boyd (215) and Scheidig (235) will meet.

SILENCE—COMFORT

THE difference between a sterling silver spoon and a plated one is not so much in the conveying power of the spoon as in the satisfaction of having what is known to be the best. There are less expensive automobiles that will carry passengers as quickly, if not as gracefully, as the Peerless. But the Peerless is built for those who wish something more than a conveyance.

We are prepared to accept a limited number of orders for February delivery.

CHICAGO STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—On the local Exchange a number of the leading issues broke sharply. People's Gas fell to 106½, against 109⅝ at the close yesterday, and Sears-Roebuck dropped 4 points, to 150½, recovering slightly. Illinois Brick shares lost 2½ points, but the pool in Street's rallied to the support of that stock, and bid the price up to a higher level after it had declined on the early dealings:

BIG HAMBURG-AMERICAN GAIN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Feb. 3.—According to trustworthy reports current on the Stock Exchange the Hamburg-American Line has recovered handsomely from the disastrous effects of the poor business of 1908, and when its board meets next Monday the balance sheet will report profits for 1909 as having reached a total of $8,250,000 as against $4,650,000 in 1908. It is also regarded as certain that the company will declare a 6 per cent. dividend for 1909. For 1908 none was declared, the entire net profits being employed to make up losses.

The North German Lloyd's year, it is believed, has been correspondingly successful, and shipping shares are unusually firm, owing to the expectation of good annual reports.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

American Failures Cause Bad Impression on London Exchange.

LONDON, Feb. 3.—Money was in better demand. Discounts were firm on the announcement of no change in the bank rate and the continental demand for gold.

The stock market continued dull and irregular, weakness in Americans causing an easier feeling in other sections. The absence of support was responsible for the drop in foreign and British securities, while realization weakened Kaffirs. Rubber shares, Grand Trunks, and Mexican rails showed some firmness on traffic returns, but they closed below the best.

The market for American securities was weak and lower, the recent American failures causing a bad impression and inducing local and Continental offerings. Although prices improved on the Wall Street opening further weakness developed, and the market closed flat.

FOREIGN TRADE OPPORTUNITIES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 3.—The Daily Consular and Trade report for to-morrow notes the following trade opportunities abroad. Further information regarding these may be obtained by addressing the Bureau of Manufactures, care of Department of Commerce and Labor, Washington, D. C., giving the number of the item referred to:

4,480. DAIRY SUPPLIES AND AGRICULTURAL IMPLEMENTS.—A communication received from a business house in Canada states that it is in the market for a good line of cream separators, wind mills, farm implements, &c., and requests to be put in touch with manufacturers of this class of goods.

4,481. AGENCY FOR AMERICAN GOODS, ESPECIALLY COTTON GOODS.—An American Consular officer in an Asiatic country has forwarded a copy of a letter received from an American exporter residing in his district, in which he offers his services as agent for exporters in the United States who wish to increase their interests in that section. The officer forwarding the report thinks that such an arrangement would be the most desirable method of extending American trade interests in the local markets, as the merchants now established do not seem to be such as would be advantageous mediums for the carrying on of a direct import trade from the United States. The market for American cotton sheetings, which are well known at present because of their superiority, is especially inviting.

4,482 LIVE STOCK FOR BREEDING PURPOSES.—A report has been received from an American Consul in Mexico to the effect that a prominent agriculturist in his district desires to import two or three high-grade Holstein bulls for his cattle ranch, and has requested him to ascertain at what prices he could obtain the animals from the dealers in the United States. The Consul states that the opportunity is a good one for the introduction of American live stock into that region, and a long step toward the improvement of the native stock.

4,483 AGENCY IN MEXICO FOR AMERICAN GOODS.—A letter received from a business man states that he has resided in Mexico for a number of years and is thoroughly acquainted with business conditions in the republic. He writes that the opportunity for American manufacturers to introduce their goods this year will be a splendid one, owing to the centennial celebration, which will attract many visitors. He states that he has been identified with machinery for mining and agricultural purposes, tools, implements, hardware, cotton goods, provisions, &c.; is thoroughly acquainted with the leading buyers in the above lines throughout the country, and would like to get in touch with houses in the United States manufacturing these goods, which are anxious to secure a share of Mexican trade.

4,484. ROLLER SKATES.—A report has been received from an American Consul in a Latin-American country furnishing information relative to the opening in his district of a large roller skating rink by an American, and opportunities for the placing of a large number of roller skates of American manufacture.

4,485. AMERICAN MANUFACTURES OF VARIOUS KINDS.—An American business man writes that one of his correspondents in Greece is interested in button machinery, printing presses of all kinds, railroad materials and supplies, pianos, hardwood lumber, shoe machinery, nails of all kinds, paper for newspapers and packages, surgical instruments, and hardware in general. Another correspondent in the same country is interested in dental goods of all kinds and oleo oil.

4,486. PAVING STREETS IN CANADA.—An American Consul in a Canadian city reports that the local board is agitating the question of repaving four blocks of the main streets of the town, and are securing information concerning the cost of various materials. A Canadian firm quoted $2.25 to $2.50 per square yard of asphalt, while the Deputy Minister of Public Works puts the estimate for vitrified brick or asphalt at $2.60 to $2.75 per square yard. About 10,000 square yards are to be paved. It might be of interest to American firms to submit estimates to the Board of Trade.

FISK & ROBINSON RELEASES.

Receiver Bronson Winthrop of the failed bond house of Fisk & Robinson, through his counsel, Philbin, Beekman, Menken & Griscom, will make application to the United States Court within the next day or two for permission to turn over to the clients of the firm securities of theirs which the firm had held for safe keeping. These amount to a large sum and authority to return them is sought to avoid inconvenience to their owners, which would result if they were held by the receiver until the estate is settled.

All the secured creditors of the firm have now expressed willingness to co-operate with the receiver to save securities held by the creditors for loans.

Quite Different
Example No. 10

During the past 20 years we have sold a vast aggregate of bonds, comprising steam railroad and industrial issues—with occasionally some unique and well selected electric railway obligation—but at present we have a bond different from all the rest.

Recurring Opportunities

We now offer, to yield about 5.20%, the bonds of a prominent and prosperous New York City corporation. The real estate holdings and improvement are worth double all the bonds. Earnings are large and are increasing rapidly. The issue is listed in New York and Amsterdam. The bonds are not callable and for numerous reasons should advance.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Weak and Active—Call Money Rates, 2¼@2¾ Per Cent.

BEAR OPERATIONS EXTENSIVE

Absence of Support in Conspicuous Shares Encourages Heavy Selling—Sharp Rally at Day's Close.

The story of yesterday's excited stock market is adequately told in the simple statement that absence of support in a half dozen conspicuous stocks, including United States Steel, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, New York Central, the Hill shares, and the Copper and Smelter securities, encouraged a vigorous raid upon the market by bearish speculators, which sent prices in general to the lowest levels touched by them in many months. A review of the salient happenings in Wall Street since the opening of the year will explain the attention devoted by the operators mentioned to stocks in which financially weak pools have been working. Discrimination against collateral of the kind furnished by such pools is now rigidly exercised with inevitable results. In the final half hour of business there was a decided rally in prices all around, but it was impossible under the circumstances to determine with anything like exactness how much of the buying which brought about this recovery arose from short covering and how much originated with investors or with the more powerful interests of the financial district. If for any reason purchases of the kind and in the volume usually made by these interests are absent to-day, it is a foregone conclusion that securities will be affected again, owing to the encouragement which will be derived from this feature of the situation by operators for the fall and the liquidation of stocks where margins have become insufficient and requests for their replenishment have met with no response. It is obvious that mingled with the purely speculative selling of shares yesterday there must have been some genuine liquidation, but it is difficult to believe that any considerable amount of liquidation based upon the oft-repeated argument of anxiety over the Washington attitude toward corporations is still to be experienced by the market. At prevailing levels the best securities are selling little if at all above their actual values, even if it be granted that these values must be appraised in the light of adverse decisions in the important cases now before the Supreme Court and a most drastic programme of corporation investigation and litigation. There is more than a suspicion abroad that advantage has been taken of a decline in securities which was inevitable for other reasons, for the most part technical, to point a moral for Mr. Taft's policies. The speech of a prominent corporation lawyer before a gathering of Philadelphia bankers, reported in Wall Street yesterday, is a fair illustration of the point here made.

The money market has been affected to some exente by the course of affairs in the securities markets. Collateral offered for loans is subject to careful scrutiny, but funds have been plentiful for all proper purposes, and rates continue to rule extremely easy. The local banks are again gaining heavily from the Government on routine transactions, having secured from that source on balance $1,176,000 since Friday last. Reports that the discount rate of the Bank of England would be lowered at yesterday's weekly convention of the Directors proved untrue, no change having been made in the quotation. The Bank made an excellent showing in spite of its shipments of gold to Paris and other points; its proportion of reserves still rules above 50 per cent.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 3.—The local market was wholly under the depressing influence today. Cambria Steel and Lehigh Valley shares suffered the most in the decline in prices, the former dropping 3½ and the latter 4 a share from last night's closing level. Trading was well distributed throughout the list, but the greatest activity was in Lehigh Valley, Cambria Steel, Philadelphia Electric, and United Gas Improvement. The market rallied feebly at times, but did not hold the advance, and continued weak until the end.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Rumored Conferences of Bankers.

The extreme weakness of the market yesterday brought to the fore the usual crop of rumors regarding conferences of important bankers for the purpose of devising means of supporting the market and stopping the decline in prices. Inquiry failed to bring to light the holding of any such conference unless this name be given to the exchanges of views which naturally occurred when bankers met yesterday to discuss other matters. There was a meeting yesterday of the China syndicate, which brought together representatives of J. P. Morgan & Co., Kuhn, Loeb & Co., the National City Bank, and the First National Bank, and this gathering may have been responsible for some of the stories of conferences to help the market. The particular matters under discussion at the meeting happened, however, to be far removed from the stock market.

⁂

Trouble Talk, Too.

One of the indications yesterday that the bears were actively at work in the market was that many rumors of impending trouble were afloat, in many instances with sufficient specifications to leave little room for doubt regarding the identity of those who were suggested in these rumors. One of the saving features, so far as the influence of these reports was concerned, was that they were so numerous that by most of those who heard them they were attributed to an effort to bear the market, and thus much of their effect was lost. As one man put it at the end of the day: "So many stories of impending trouble have been circulated in the Street to-day that one would almost be convinced by them that the bears were finding it hard to put the market down any more."

⁂

Poor December Earnings.

Some of the railroad statements for December, which came to hand yesterday, reflected clearly the effects of the bad weather in December, and some of the other unfavorable influences which bore on earnings in that month, particularly the switchmen's strike on the Northwestern roads. The Illinois Central for the month showed an increase of $98,000 in gross earnings, but the expenses of operation increased so heavily that the net earnings for the month showed a loss of $448,000 compared with the previous December. The Burlington's statement for December showed a loss of $180,000 in gross and a reduction of $764,000 in net for the month. The Rock Island's December statement showed a loss of $302,000 in gross, with an increase in expenses which brought the loss in net up to $534,000. On the other hand, among Eastern roads, the Jersey Central in December increased its gross earnings by $664,000 and its net earnings by $681,000.

⁂

Steel Rail Buying.

One of the most reassuring pieces of news affecting the steel trade for some time was the announcement, yesterday, that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad Company had closed contracts for 80,000 tons of steel rails. Of the total the Maryland Steel Company receives 25,100 tons, the Carnegie Steel Company 24,850 tons, the Illinois Steel Company 21,700 tons, and the Bethlehem Steel Company 7,150 tons, the latter being for open-hearth rails, as were also 7,600 tons of the Maryland Steel order and 11,500 of the allotment of the Illinois Steel Company.

BOSTON STOCK MARKET.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Feb. 3.—The local market opened weak this morning and finding few bids traders began to hammer prices. This brought in commission house selling and prices for all the active issues crumbled rapidly. North Butte lost 5 points further to 30. Lake sold down to 66¾, Arizona Commercial to 40, Copper Range to 74½, and the balance of the list is all lower in proportion. The market closed weak and at very nearly lowest prices of the day.

MAYOR REBUKES POLICE DICTATORS

Warns Capt. Henry, Who Arrested Miss Milholland, That They Must Be Guided by Law.

"TOUCH TOO MANY PEOPLE"

They Must Not Take Either Side in Labor Disputes—As to Changes, He Doesn't Believe in "Shake-Ups."

Mayor Gaynor held a long talk yesterday with Inspector McCafferty, present head of the Detective Bureau, listened to a complaint against Capt. Dominick Henry of the Mercer Street Police Station, preferred by Lieut. Henry W. Torney, U. S. A., and heard Capt. Henry in reply; told the reporters that they were attaching entirely too much significance to the visits of Police Inspectors and Captains to his office, and said that he intended to have still others visit him in the future, and in general indicated that he is keeping a careful eye on the police administration of this city.

After the Henry hearing the Mayor delivered a lecture on police duties. Lieut. Torney, a graduate of West Point, stationed in New York in the recruiting service, had complained to the Mayor about the recent arrest of himself and Miss Inez Milholland, the Vassar graduate, who has interested herself in the shirtwaist strikers. In court Mr. Torney was discharged. Miss Milholland has not been examined.

There is a shirtwaist factory at 21 Waverley Place. On the night of the arrest the Lieutenant told the Mayor he was standing on the block and saw the police arrest several girls. He and Miss Milholland followed the policemen and the prisoners to the Mercer Street Police Station, expecting to offer themselves as witnesses. He simply stood by the railing, he said, saying nothing to any one, either inside or outside the station. Capt. Henry then ordered his arrest, said Lieut. Torney. Miss Milholland was arrested at the same time.

Capt. Henry told the Mayor, in reply to this statement, that there was a crowd congregated in front of 21 Waverley Place that night; that he had ordered several persons arrested, and that the arrests had been made. Asked whether he had seen the Lieutenant do or say anything, he said he had not. The Mayor asked why he had arrested Lieut. Torney, and the Captain said he had done so because the Lieutenant was in the crowd.

The Mayor then asked the Lieutenant if he wanted formally to lodge a complaint against the Captain for unlawful arrest. The latter said he did not; that he had sought the hearing merely in order that it might become known that he had been needlessly arrested.

The Mayor, addressing both, told them that the trouble with the police for a long time had been that they put their hands on persons they had no right to touch. It was their business to arrest persons they saw committing some criminal offense, and if they did not see them commit the offense they should keep their hands off them.

Capt. Henry, continued the Mayor, looked to him like a reasonable policeman, and he believed that the Captain had been only following a bad example. He told the Captain that in strikes the police were to preserve the public peace and were not to take any side. Under our laws employers and employes fighting each other in an industrial war have to try the thing out as a matter of strength and endurance, and the Government had no right, through the police or in any other way, to give aid or comfort to either side.

The Mayor then informed Capt. Henry that the police should preserve order in front of the shirtwaist factories, but that they must touch no one unless they saw that person commit an offense defined by law. He said he had sent to some of the factories recently, and had found that in some cases the men employed to accompany the non-union workers to and from work had gone out in the street and had elbowed people about, making a great disturbance. He said they should be arrested just as quickly as the strikers. Capt. Henry answered that he had arrested some of these men. Then he went away to think over the Mayor's remarks.

Inspector McCafferty went in to see the Mayor before the Henry hearing began. Indeed, he was at the City Hall before the Mayor. The Mayor was closeted with him for nearly an hour. The Inspector would not say what they had discussed.

The Mayor would not say anything about the Inspector's visit. He called attention to the fact that he had talked with Inspector McClusky of the Tenderloin district on Wednesday. He said he would likely talk with a good many other police officers. Too much significance was being attached to these visits, he went on; he wanted to know about the Police Department, and he was talking with men who were supposed to know about it. He didn't believe in violent shake-ups, anyhow, he said.

Commissioner Baker would not discuss the Mayor's conferences with his subordinates.

"Why did McCafferty see the Mayor?" he was asked.

"Nothing to say," he replied.

"Did you know he was going?"

"Nothing to say," the Commissioner reiterated.

"Did the Mayor send for him?" the Commissioner was asked.

"Nothing to say," was the reply.

The men at Police Headquarters are uneasy. Everybody there feels that something is about to happen. "Has anything dropped yet?" is a question asked fifty times a day in the corridors. "I wish we knew where we are at," is a desire heard even oftener.

Commissioner Baker is meanwhile looking after his chosen subordinates the best he knows how. He has sent to the Board of Estimate an application for these increases in salaries: For Second Deputy Commissioner Kirby, Third Deputy Commissioner Walsh, and Fourth Deputy Commissioner Reynolds, from $4,000 to $6,000 a year; for his secretary, Thomas Carroll, from $3,000 to $3,500. He has asked other increases for his office.

SPLIT ON LONG BEACH FUND.

Voters of Hempstead Want Money Used to Pay Off Road Bonds.

The voters of Hempstead, L. I., and the authorities of that town are at odds over the disposition of the $108,000 paid by the Estates of Long Beach for a tract of the common lands of the town at Long Beach. The voters want the funds invested so that they may become a sinking fund to pay off road bonds due in 1923. The authorities, however, seem to regard this as illegal, and want the money used for schools and other purposes.

At a recent town election the voters approved the proposal to sell the land to the Long Beach company. Yesterday Supreme Court Justice Kelly of Brooklyn was asked for a writ of mandamus to force the Town Treasurer to dispose of the money as the voters wished.

It was set forth that the voters voted for the sale of the land with the understanding that the money would be used for roads. Justice Kelly reserved decision.

Corroborating Counterfeiter's Story.

The trial of eight Italians on counterfeiting charges before Judge Ray in the United States Circuit Court yesterday took in a mass of evidence corroborating the details of the case that has been built up against the accused men. The witnesses included railroad employes, postmen, farmers, and storekeepers who had occasion to see the accused men come and go at Highland and the adjoining towns. M. Danan, the printer, who, according to Comito, sold the gang the printing press which they used at Highland, also told about its purchase. The case will go on to-day.

WOMEN ROUT A BURGLAR.

Chase Him from a Neighbor's Flat Into a Captor's Arms.

Owing to the vigilance and pluck of Mrs. Mary Walsh and Mrs. Mary Williams, a burglar, who said he was Michael Maloni, 18 years old, a cigarmaker, of 346 East Seventy-fifth Street, was arrested yesterday morning on the third floor of a tenement house, at 336 East Forty-ninth Street, as he was about to escape with a bag of loot.

Mrs. Williams saw that the door of the rear apartment, occupied by Mrs. Aiken, was open, and knowing that the woman had gone out of the city she rushed upstairs to consult her friend, Mrs. Walsh. The two quickly decided that a thief was in the Aiken flat, and came down to capture him. When the man heard them he closed the door and placed his foot against it. The lock he had wrenched off the door was lying on the mat.

"Let us in," said Mrs. Walsh, "or we'll burst the door in."

Suddenly the man rushed out with an open valise in his hand and tried to pass the two women. They grabbed him, but he tore his coat out of their grasp and ran down the stairs, dropping the articles out of the bag as he went. The women yelled "Thief!" and the cry was heard by Fred Joyce, who lives on the ground floor, in time for him to come out and seize the robber. He was handed over to Patrolman James McKee, who took him to the East Fifty-first Street Station.

Mrs. Walsh said that the greater part of the jewelry found on the prisoner did not belong to Mrs. Aiken. Capt. Lantry thought that Maloni was the flat thief who has made many hauls in that neighborhood recently. The prisoner was taken to Police Headquarters.

WILL RE-ELECT WINTHROP.

But Opposition Is Expected to Miss Granger in Education Board.

The re-election of Egerton L. Winthrop, Jr., as President of the Board of Education at the annual meeting of the board next Monday afternoon is regarded as practically certain. No one else has been mentioned to succeed him, and it is not believed that other nominations will be made. It is also more than probable that Commissioner John Greene will be chosen to succeed himself as Vice President.

A division may come when Miss Ruth E. Granger's nomination as District Superintendent at $5,000 a year, made a special subject for consideration at this meeting, is taken up. Miss Granger has been bitterly opposed by teachers fighting for equal pay, because she has been quoted as saying that a woman does not and can not do as much work as a man, and ought not to have as much pay. Women teachers, resenting such opinions, have written to School Commissioners, urging them not to vote for Miss Granger, and all the power possessed by the organizations of women teachers is said to have been thrown into the scale against her.

Commissioners, however, who have not taken to the equal-pay idea and the method of its promulgation are said to be determined to vote for Miss Granger to rebuke her equal-pay opponents. The Board of Superintendents has already nominated her.

DEATH ENDS A ROMANCE.

Yoshi Ishikura, Betrothed to Japanese Student, a Victim of Tonsilitis Here.

When Kazunobu Kanokoge, a student at the Union Theological Seminary, this city, returns to his native Japan to preach the Gospel he will not take with him young Yoshi Ishikura as his bride. Instead he will carry with him a heavy heart and memories of a romance ended by death. Yoshi died in the Training School for Nurses of the Brooklyn Hospital on Monday. Her body is to be cremated and her ashes taken back to her old home in the Province of Chibaco, Japan.

Her death was due to tonsilitis and a complication of ailments. She had been at the Brooklyn Hospital seven months studying to become a nurse. She was 23 years old. Kanokoge, the young missionary student, and Yoshi became engaged five years ago in Japan. They were to marry and return to Japan as soon as the girl was graduated from the training school.

PROTEST ABOUT PILOT CHARTS

Maritime Men Ask Congress to Let Navy Continue to Make Them.

There was mailed yesterday to every member of Congress and each member of the House Committee on Appropriations a copy of the resolution adopted by the Directors of the Maritime Association protesting against the proposed transfer from the Hydrographic Office of the navy to the Weather Bureau the work of making up the pilot charts. These charts are issued by the Government for the use of navigators on the coasts and great lakes.

The maritime men believe that it would be a grave mistake to intrust such work to a department without experience. They declare such a change would endanger life and shipping and make possible an enormous property loss. The resolution ends with the statement that, in the minds of the board, there is not the slightest justification for transferring the work to any other department.

RADIATOR STOCK PAYS MORE.

Common Is Placed on 10 Per Cent. Basis—New Issue Decided On.

CHICAGO, Feb. 3.—The Directors of the American Radiator Company to-day placed the common stock of the corporation on a 10 per cent. yearly dividend basis by raising the regular quarterly rate to 2 per cent. and declaring the customary extra dividend of 2 per cent. They also arranged to withdraw $2,000,000 of the company's authorized but unissued preferred stock and to replace it with $2,000,000 of common. This will keep the total authorized capital at $10,000,000, as it is now. The preferred stock will remain at $3,000,000, the amount now outstanding, and the common will be expanded from $5,000,000, the amount now out, to $7,000,000.

A special meeting of the stockholders has been called for March 2 at East Orange, N. J., for the authorization of these changes.

It is the intention to issue at $150 a share to the present holders of Radiator common and preferred stock $800,000 of the proposed new common stock, in the ratio of one new share for each ten shares of the old.

BOY HAS $35,700 A YEAR.

Court Asked to Allow Robert A. Chambers $6,500 to Keep a Brougham.

Robert A. Chambers, a fifteen-year-old orphan, with an income of $35,700 a year, yesterday made application to Justice Hendrick in the Supreme Court for an allowance of $6,500 annually. The application was submitted through Mortimer M. Singer, a maternal uncle. Young Chambers attends the Berkeley School and lives with his aunt, Mrs. Daniel M. Brady, at 33 West Seventy-sixth Street.

Both his parents died in 1909, leaving him heir to both their estates. The court was informed that part of the proposed allowance would be to maintain a two-horse brougham, which had been the property of his parents, for the boy's use. Michael T. Mulqueen was appointed referee to take testimony.

MONTAGUE ROBERTS IN JAIL.

Driver of Winning Car in New York to Paris Race Must Serve 30 Days.

HARTFORD, Conn., Feb. 3.—Montague Henry Roberts, a chauffeur of international reputation, began serving his sentence of thirty days in jail to-day, which was imposed on him last December for reckless driving of automobiles in Southington in September, 1909.

When sentence was pronounced Roberts appealed to the Supreme Court, but he came to Hartford yesterday from his home at Bristol and said he was ready to begin his sentence, his appeal having been withdrawn. There is also a fine, and this will be paid as soon as his sentence is completed.

Roberts has won cups in Vanderbilt races and was the driver of the American car which won the New York to Paris race.

COMMERCE CHAMBER FOR EQUAL RATES

AN ISSUE ON DIFFERENTIALS

Opposition to Paragraph 6 of the Corporation Tax—Cortelyou Reports on Uniform State Laws.

The Chamber of Commerce at its monthly meeting yesterday appointed a special committee to work with other commercial organizations to stop discrimination in railroad rates against New York. The committee men are Charles A. Schieren, Chairman; Herman A. Metz, James A. Smith, Albert Plaut, and Calvin Tompkins. This complaint of New York merchants, members of the Chamber, on which the committee is to act, was put on record:

> The Trunk Line Association has asked the commercial organizations in the leading Atlantic Coast cities to assist it in the solution of the problem of differential rates on import business from Boston and Newport News. This request opens the door for effective consideration by commercial interests of New York of differentials, both export and import, which form an unjust and injurious discrimination against the commerce of this city.
>
> Resolved, That the special committee on railroad rates from New York to the interior be authorized to select three of its members to represent the chamber in a joint committee of commercial organizations of New York with the object of defending the commerce of the port against this obnoxious discrimination so antagonostic to the spirit of that provision of the Federal Constitution which declares:
>
> "No preference shall be given by any regulation of commerce or revenue to the ports of one State over those of another."

The Chamber declared opposition to the paragraph of the Corporation Tax law which provides for the filing in Washington, as public documents, of the returns made by corporations. A. Barton Hepburn, on behalf of the Executive Committee, submitted resolutions, which were passed and which will be transmitted to the authorities at Washington, calling for the repeal of Paragraph 6, which is the objectionable one. The resolution recited these objections:

> Such publicity will expose corporations to sensational attacks and will disclose many features regarding their accounts and concerns that will greatly injure their business. The Government is amply protected by the provision that the statements made of any return must be sworn to, with a privilege to inspect the books of any corporation if the Government suspects that an improper return has been made, coupled with severe penalties against false oaths.

George B. Cortelyou, acting Chairman of the Chamber of Commerce's Conference Committee to the meeting in Washington of the National Civic Federation to consider uniform State laws, reviewed the work of the session held there. He said in conclusion:

"While the Chamber by appointing delegates to the conference has given expression of its sympathy with the movement for uniformity of State laws, it is not committed to any particular measures which were approved by the conference."

A. Foster Higgins, Chairman of the Committee on Harbors and Shipping, reported that Nantucket Shoals was filling up and impeding shipping. He recommended that the Chamber request the Secretary of Commerce and Labor to dredge the channel.

FAUNCE PRAISES HUGHES.

Hails Governor as Equal to Lincoln at Brown Alumni Dinner.

President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, speaking at the Brown alumni dinner last night in the Hotel Astor, declared that the mind of Gov. Hughes was more like Abraham Lincoln's in grasp and analytical power than any he knew of in public life at the present time. The tribute to the absent Governor and alumnus of Brown, class '81, was greeted with three cheers and a tiger. The demonstration was the greatest of the evening, with no participant more enthusiastic than John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a Brown man of '97.

President Faunce, who could scarcely speak at all from hoarseness, had followed the toastmaster, Dr. Hermon C. Bumpus, director of the American Museum of Natural History. Dr. Bumpus, whom President Faunce later referred to as the donor of the Brown biological department, had urged Brown and other American colleges to strive more to find out what kind of education these times called for, and not to go on in the old ruts of giving a little classics and a little of almost everything else.

President Faunce seemingly answered this call for a different kind of education—a better adapted education—by saying that he received many suggestions, and the most radical reforms were not advocated by those a few years out of college, but by the earlier students, who had lost sight of much of college life. There was one alumnus, he said, who wrote almost weekly suggesting surprising changes. He recently found out that this man was 73 or 74 years old.

"What we really need in way of reform for our colleges," said President Faunce, "is not to stuff the students' minds with information, but to train the intellect to grapple with and analyze complex situations. One of the reasons I am devoted to reading the writings and addresses of Lincoln is that his mind was able to strip away the hull and find the kernel.

"There is no mind in public service to-day, in my judgment, so like Lincoln's in its grasp and analytical power as that of the Governor of the Empire State, Charles E. Hughes, a Brown alumnus."

President Faunce also declared that men were paying their chauffeurs more than they were the men who teach their sons. He told of a rich man who was recently talking with a young college professor in Providence.

"If you won't take offense," said the rich visitor, "I would like to ask you what salary you get?"

"My salary is $1,200," was the professor's reply.

"Why," said the man, "that is just what I pay my chauffeur, except that when I take him out of town I pay also all his expenses."

"Now," continued Dr. Faunce, "can we afford to pay our chauffeurs more than the men who teach our sons?"

The matter of low salaries, he said, was making it yearly more of a problem to get or retain in the college Faculty the type of intellect and personality that should be there. In this connection he made a plea for higher manhood and higher ideals in business conduct.

"What is the use of talking 1,000 miles by telephone?" he asked, "if we have nothing to say.

"What is the use of riding in an aeroplane if black care rides behind?"

Just before President Faunce made his reference to Gov. Hughes, Dr. Bumpus read this telegram from the Governor, which came just as the alumni were assembling:

> I am very sorry that I cannot be at the dinner to-night. Give my greetings to the Brown men, and my renewed felicitations to President Faunce, and permit me to join with all in best wishes for the prosperity of old Brown. CHARLES E. HUGHES.
>
> Albany, Feb. 3.

Among the other speakers were Walter H. Page, George H. Ferris, and ex-Senator Everett Colby of New Jersey, a Brown man of '97 and classmate of Mr. Rockefeller, who joined with much apparent enthusiasm in all the songs and cheers with which each speaker was greeted.

CITY CAN AID POST-GRADUATE.

Dr. George Miller Wants Public Hospital Set Aside for Training of Internes

Dr. George N. Miller, President of the New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, urged at the annual dinner of the institution's Directors and faculty at Delmonico's last night that the Mayor be prevailed upon to grant one of the city's hospitals to the school for the training of internes and giving instruction in clinics. The school in return, he declared, would guarantee "material service and teaching."

He hoped the hospital would be placed at the disposal of the school at the completion of the new Post-Graduate Building, which is to be erected with the $2,000,000 legacy left the school a year ago by Frederick Hewitt of Owego.

Referring to the building, Dr. Miller said that already $1,500,000 of the legacy has been received by the school, and the rest is expected soon. When the structure is completed the Post-Graduate School will be clear of debt, and will have $500,000 in the bank. A cheer from the diners greeted this announcement.

Dr. Miller expressed himself in favor of a law to make it necessary for every medical student to take a post-graduate course before practicing. He declared that too much importance could not be attached to post-graduate training, and that to become a skilled physician a student stands in need of such a course.

Surgeon General George H. Torney of the United States Army told of the assistance the Post-Graduate School is rendering the Army Department by its instruction in the treatment for tropical diseases. An army Captain, who has been assigned to that branch at the medical school, is now abroad looking into English methods, and will soon have a report to make.

Other speakers were Dr. Samuel Meltzer, Associate Director of the Rockefeller Institute; Dr. Graham Lusk, President of the Harvey Society, and Dr. Leonard Weber, a member of the Faculty of the Post-Graduate School.

SHERIFF'S JURY DINES.

Tammany and Reform Represented at Knickerbocker Feast.

The second panel of the Sheriff's jury attended a dinner at the Hotel Knickerbocker last night. The room was handsomely decorated with roses and foliage. Frank Lawrence, President of the Lotos Club, was toastmaster, and William Gillette, the actor, and Job Hedges responded to toasts. Sheriff John S. Shea spoke.

Among those present were J. Sergeant Cram, Grand Sachem Cohalan of Tammany Hall, and his brother, John P., the Surrogate; Philip F. Donohue, the Tammany Treasurer; Thomas F. Smith, Secretary; Michael J. Drummond, who was boomed for Commissioner of Correction; George Ehret, the brewer, and his son; Frank Farrell, President of the New York American Baseball Club; ex-Sheriff Thomas F. Foley, J. E. Gaffney, John F. Galvin, the defeated candidate for Borough President; Louis Hart, John A. Henneberry, Alderman Tristan B. Johnson, Samuel Krulewitch, The McManus, Gen. E. L. Molineux, Michael J. Mulqueen, Judge Joseph F. Mulqueen, Charles F. Murphy, leader of Tammany Hall; M. W. Rayens, Condemnation Commissioner, and P. J. Scully.

A SERUM FOR PNEUMONIA.

Two Physicians Tell of Successful Test of New Treatment.

Two physicians, Dr. Floyd and Dr. Lucas, describe in The Journal of Medical Research, the publication issued by the Rockefeller Institute, the results of treating forty-one patients suffering from pneumonia with a serum. The mortality was only 12.2 per cent. The New York Medical Journal, in recommending that the treatment be tried, says:

"These solutions were administered in the thigh or the back under aseptic precautions. In children, five cubic centimeters was the usual dose; in adults the standard dose was ten cubic centimeters, given twice daily. In severe cases fifteen or twenty cubic centimeters were given at a dose, three or four times in the twenty-four hours, without harmful effect.

"Forty-one cases of pneumonia were treated with this product. Twelve of the patients were children of from two and a half to fourteen years of age, and twenty-nine were adults of from twenty to seventy years of age. All the cases were examples of lobar pneumonia, except three of broncho pneumonia in children. Five of the patients died, a mortality of 12.2 per cent. Two of those who died were children with broncho pneumonia, and three were adults with lobar pneumonia. Two of the latter had complicating cardiac lesions, and one was a man, aged seventy years."

FLETCHER HARPER'S HURTS.

Operations Necessary to Save Him from Being a Cripple—Hurt Hunting.

Fletcher Harper of the well-known publishing firm, who was badly injured several months ago, when his hunter fell upon him during a run of the hounds at the Westchester Hunt Club, and who has since been confined to his bed at the home of Eugene Reynal, near White Plains, was brought here yesterday by special train from White Plains and taken to the New York Hospital, where he is to undergo a series of difficult operations. Several of his ribs were crushed, as was also his pelvic bone, and will have to be wired so that they can knit, or he may be a cripple for life. Mr. Harper was taken to the White Plains station in one of Mr. Reynal's automobiles and placed aboard a parlor car. He was accompanied by his mother and sister and Drs. Kenyon and Page.

Mr. Reynal said that Mr. Harper had shown remarkable vitality, and that he considered his partial recovery marvellous. At one time it was feared that there was no hope for him.

WHITE SLAVE INQUIRY FUND.

$25,000 Needed to Put Assistant District Attorneys in Magistrates' Courts.

District Attorney Whitman will ask to-day the Board of Estimate for $25,000 to assist the Grand Jury investigating white slave traffic. The Grand Jury has taken an adjournment until Feb. 12, but there is no pause in the investigation itself.

Mr. Whitman will also ask for an appropriation of $24,000 a year to provide for new deputy assistants to be stationed in the Magistrates' Courts, whether for six at $4,000 each or eight at $3,000, is not yet determined.

In late years less than half the cases held for the Grand Jury have resulted in indictments, and many of them are dismissed in Special Sessions.

The third conviction following indictments filed in the White Slave investigation was reached yesterday, when a jury in General Sessions found Emilio Dicicco, a seventeen-year-old boy of 2,213 Second Avenue, guilty of abduction. The case was tried before Judge Mulqueen by Assistant District Attorney Jacoby. With Joseph Marifo, who is yet to be tried, Dicicco was indicted for taking three girls, one of them less than 18 years old, to Hartford, Conn.

"White Slaver" Gave a False Address.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A news item in Wednesday's TIMES gives as the address of a man convicted of selling a girl into "white slavery" 311 East Twelfth Street. This is an error, and a peculiarly unfortunate one, which I am sure you will correct when you are informed that the house in question, far from being the resort of persons engaged in this infamous traffic, has as a part of its work the protection of young women from the dangers of the underworld.

It is the Shelter for Evicted and Homeless Women, and is maintained by the Children's Aid Society. Its protection is extended to mothers with children who have been turned out of their homes by dispossession proceedings or who find themselves without shelter or friendless by reason of other misfortunes. Last year it cared for more than 500 women and children, taking them in and supplying their needs until the wives could be reunited with their husbands, or some employment could be found for the girls who sought shelter. Almost al lof the women so helped were young and many of them in such desperate straits that they might have become victims of misfortune if they had been left to shift for themselves. With such assistance and sympathy as they receive many of these are enabled to get a new start in life, and several have married from the house they entered in such wretchedness.

The shelter is supported by contributions and needs help. The Children's Aid Society will be glad to receive gifts at the central office, 105 East Twenty-second Street.

A. S. Guggenheim Fails to Get His Son.

The efforts of Alexander S. Guggenheim to get possession of his five-year-old son Mortimer failed yesterday, when Justice Hendrick dismissed a writ of habeas corpus directed against Mrs. Minnie Guggenheim, who received a decree of separation a year and a half ago, and is now suing for divorce. Justice Hendrick, however, instructed Mrs. Guggenheim to permit her husband to see the boy any week day and to take him for a three-hour walk on Sundays.

THE COMMODITIES MARKETS.

Wheat Closes Strong After Early Weakness—Provisions Weaken on Heavy Hog Receipts—Cotton Steady.

Wheat was again quiet, but showed considerable weakness early. It opened off on the cables, and there was pressure all the morning, but later in the day there was good recovery from the low point on covering of shorts and buying against privileges. The foreign markets were weak on the heavier Argentine shipments, and on large offerings of Australian and Russian wheat. The Argentine shipments for the week were estimated at 2,400,000 bushels, against 952,000 bushels last week, and but 5,584,000 bushels last year. Receipts in the Northwest were liberal, and the total movement was again double the movement of last year. The total receipts for the four days this week have shown an increase over last week of about 200,000 bushels, and an increase over last year of 2,000,000 bushels, the receipts being considerably more than double the total last year. The reports on the condition of the crop were favorable, and a well-known Western authority states that the grain, where the tops are brown, shows a healthy root condition. Exporters are practically out of the market on American grain. Cash wheat was dull; No. 2 red, $1.30, elevator, domestic; No. 2 red, free on board, afloat, $1.30; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.24⅛; No. 2 hard, Winter, $1.24⅛; No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, $1.19¾.

Corn was very steady, notwithstanding the very heavy receipts. The price was a little lower earlier with wheat, but there was a good deal of buying on the wet weather east of the Mississippi. The actual receipts, however, are very large at the West, and this heavy movement, with the great discount of cash corn under May at Chicago, shows that there is steady pressure of cash corn on the market. In four days Western receipts have gained 900,000 bushels over last week, and are nearly three times the movement of last year. Cash corn was quiet; No. 2 was quoted 72½c, elevator, domestic; No. 2, 70½c, export; No. 3, 70c; No. 4, 69¾c, and steamer, 69¾c.

Oats were also very steady, with a fairly good demand reported by commission houses at the West, and quite a steady cash market. The receipts are large, but do not seem to bring pressure on the cash market. There has been a gain of over 100,000 bushels a day in the receipts, compared with last week, and the movement is nearly three times as heavy as last year. Cash oats were steady. Natural white, 52½@55c, track; white clipped, 53½@56c.

Provision market was active and weak. There was a very sharp reaction in values from the close of the preceding day, largely due to profit taking and lack of support. Live hog receipts were larger not only in Chicago, but at other Western points.

COTTON.

Cotton was influenced by the firmness of Liverpool and the firmness of the spot market on the one hand, and the weakness of the stock market on the other. The market opened firm, and improved with a fairly good volume of outside and commission house buying. This demand was brought on by the strength of the foreign markets, and the reports of better demand for spot cotton in Liverpool and of an improving trade in Manchester. There were several private cables to the effect that the conditions were improving on the other side, and that there was a better demand for spot cotton as a result of this improvement in trade, and a better tone on account of the small movement in America.

From the early advance the market showed a quick reaction, owing to the weakness of the stock market, and the selling pressure which this brought on the food market. After the market had declined about 10 to 15 points from the highest of the day, there was a little pause in the selling pressure, and a better tone was shown. Prices showed very little improvement, however, and the close was a small net change for the day.

Reports regarding the movement of cotton continued of decided influence on the situation. The receipts were very small, both at the interior and at the ports, and this decrease in the movement of cotton with a continuation of liberal shipments of cotton from the interior points and a firmness of the Southern holdings of spot cotton are all of considerable weight in the price making situation. Southern spot markets were firmly held, although the official quotations were unchanged for the day.

Spot cotton quiet, 5 decline. Middling uplands, 14.75c. Middling Gulf, 15c.

COFFEE.

Coffee was only moderately active, with total sales amounting to 16,250 bags. Prices at the opening were steady and unchanged and during the session there was very little change, closing at unchanged to 5 points net decline. The weakness in the stock market caused moderate liquidation, but offerings on the whole were well taken, with bull interests the principal buyers. Cables were little changed, Havre being steady at the previous day's quotations, while Hamburg was unchanged to ¼ pfennig decline. The Brazilian markets were closed on Wednesday, but a private cable said Rio was firm with an upward tendency, and that buyers were willing to pay more money, but sellers had withdrawn from the market. Spot coffee quiet but steady, 8⅝ to 8¾ for Rio No. 7.

Mitchel Wants Permits Revoked.

President Mitchel of the Aldermen will ask to-day the Board of Estimate to call on Borough President Gresser of Queens to revoke the permits granted by him to the Long Island Railroad Company for the improvements it has been making betweeen Jamaica and Woodside. The President maintains that the Board of Estimate has authority over this matter, and that, as the original franchise of the road was for a two-track line, the cost to the taxpayers of grade crossing abolitions in future street openings will be at least $1,000,000, unless immediate action is taken by the board.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

The Montefiore Home Sells Its Washington Heights Property for $600,000—Van Orden Construction Co. Buys East 28th Street Plot—Bronx and Suburban Market Active.

The Montefiore Home for Chronic Invalids which recently purchased four square blocks in the west Bronx for the erection of a larger institution, sold its old site occupying a square block in Washington Heights yesterday to Leopold Kahn for a consideration approximating $600,000. The new owner will improve the property with high-class apartment houses.

Besides the main building of Montefiore Home, which occupies the entire block bounded by Broadway, Hamilton Place, 138th, and 139th Streets, the sale involved the grounds and the pavilion occupying the entire easterly side of Hamilton Place from 138th to 139th Street.

The latter parcel has a frontage of 181.9 feet on Hamilton Place, 116.5 feet on 138th Street, and 69.8 feet on 139th Street. The ground occupied by the home fronts 199.10 feet on Broadway, 223.10 feet on 139th Street, 217.1 feet on Hamilton Place, and 139 feet on 138th Street.

The property was sold on a two-year contract, and the present hospital will not be removed or the property delivered to the new owners until the new buildings in the Bronx are ready for occupancy.

Contracts for the sale, which was negotiated by Hall J. How & Co., were closed by Streeck & Streeck, counsel for the sellers.

The property recently purchased by the Trustees of the home in the Bronx includes the blocks bounded by Gun Hill Road, Troyon Avenue, 210th Street, and Steuben Avenue, and the opposite block fronts on 210th Street, between Steuben and Woodlawn Avenues. The tract comprises about 255 lots, and the price was approximately $750,000.

BUSINESS TROUBLES

JOSEPH BRILL.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Joseph Brill, manufacturer of infants' wear, 415 Grand Street, show liabilities of $6,446 and nominal assets of $2,040, consisting of notes of J. Brill, Incorporated, $2,000, and two shares of stock in that corporation, $40.

BENJAMIN LEVIN & CO.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Benjamin Levin & Co., manufacturers of vests and smoking jackets, 751 Broadway, show liabilities of $5,104 and assets of $3,438, consisting of stock, $2,000; fixtures, $927; accounts, $500, and cash in bank, $11.

MORRIS L. EISNER.—Morris L. Eisner, a clerk of Poughkeepsie, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities of $270 and no assets. He has only one creditor, Julius Solomon, who obtained a judgment against him on Nov. 12, 1903, for clothing sold to Mr. Eisner in New York City.

REUBEN A. HINE.—Reuben A. Hine, who has a bakery at 129 Columbus Avenue, and lunch room at 251 Columbus Avenue, has made an assignment to Henry A. Heiser. He has been in business twenty years. A few days ago A. Crane obtained a judgment against him for $938 for rent, and execution was issued to the Sheriff, but the levy was withdrawn on Wednesday.

HASKIEL SILBERMAN.—A petition in bankruptcy has been filed against Haskiel Silberman, dealer in general merchandise at Haverstraw, N. Y., by Louis M. Taylor, a creditor for $544. It was alleged that he is insolvent, made preferential payments of $500, transferred merchandise and accounts of $3,000, and is believed to have left town in December and has gone to Germany.

CHARLES E. EALES.—Schedules in bankruptcy of Charles E. Eales, liquor dealer of 971 Third Avenue, show liabilities of $24,051, of which $18,300 is secured by chattel mortgages, and nominal assets of $632, consisting of stock $500 and money due him for rent $132. Among the creditors are George Ehret, $9,000, secured, and $1,500 unsecured; Josephine Cugley, $7,000, secured; Bligh & O'Conner, $2,300, secured; Frank Flynn, $1,200, and Gibson Distilling Company, $1,094.

REED & AUERBACHER COMPANY.—Schedules in bankruptcy of the Reed Auerbacher Company, dealer in hardware at 229 Bowery, show liabilities of $13,261 and assets consisting of accounts $4,000, cash in bank $4, and stock and fixtures, amount not given. They were sold by William Henkel, Jr., the receiver, for $4,900, it is said. There are 207 creditors, among whom are Sargent & Co., $4,669; Charles J. Stebbins & Co., $472; Norwalk Lock Company, $365, and Topping Brothers, $467.

HARRIS REISFELD.—Judge Hand has denied a discharge from bankruptcy to Harris Reisfeld, manufacturer of furs at 12 East Fifty-ninth Street, against whom a petition in bankruptcy was filed on Dec. 18, 1908, and his schedules showed liabilities of $12,000 and assets of $1,370. Creditors charged him with concealing $10,000 assets which he had bought about three months prior to his bankruptcy. The referee reported that the charge was not established, but Judge Hand said he could not see that Reisfeld at all accounted for the disappearance of so large an amount of assets. All the disbursements he made are less than $4,000, with which sum he seeks to account for the disappearance of goods in unmanufactured state which he bought for $10,000.

GLOBE FOUNDRY COMPANY.—Another, the third, petition in bankruptcy, has been filed against the Globe Foundry Company of Port Chester, which had an office at 51 Cliff Street, this city, by these creditors: Emma A. Mills, $35,945; George Mertz's Sons, $2,601, and Thomas J. Blain, $150. These are the same creditors who filed the second petition, and the petition filed yesterday was to remedy a defect in the second petition by alleging that the company on Feb. 2 had admitted in writing its inability to pay its debts, and willingness to be adjudged bankrupt, by order of the Board of Directors. In the second petition the authority of the Board of Directors was not mentioned. Mrs. Mills's claim is also larger by $29,910.

MRS. GOULD BROKAW GETS A SEPARATION

Justice Putnam Allows Her $15,000 a Year Instead of the $30,000 She Demanded.

HER HEALTH IS MENACED

Plaintiff's Nervous Irritability Helped to Alienate Her Husband, but He Abandoned Her, Court Finds.

Special to The New York Times.

MINEOLA, L. I., Feb. 3.—Mrs. Mary Blair Brokaw won her suit for separation from her husband, William Gould Brokaw, to-day. The decision carries with it $15,000 a year alimony. Justice Harrington Putnam, before whom the case was heard last December, filed his decision with the County Clerk of Nassau County in the morning. The hearing lasted seventeen days and two nights, and the entire matrimonial history of the couple down to their final separation on Dec. 15, 1908, was gone into.

Justice Putnam found that whether or not Mr. Brokaw's acts constituted cruelty, in the legal sense as Mrs. Brokaw's counsel alleged, he had on grounds that could not but be regarded as serious left his wife to the care of others in Paris, and remained apart from her on the homeward trip in such a manner as to cause embarrassment. Mrs. Brokaw's charges of infidelity the court declared unfounded. The aleged threats made against Mrs. Brokaw's life with a shotgun by her husband, the Judge declared, were not seriously made or so regarded at the time.

"The investigation of these marital differences has been full and exhaustive," the Justice writes. "The proofs disclose an increasing incompatibility, intensified by nervous irritation on the part of Mrs. Brokaw. Mr. Brokaw is shown, however, to have provided liberally for his wife, and was especially solicitous for her welfare, furnishing nurses and the best medical care for her during illness.

"Mr. Brokaw's tendency to jealousy was early manifested, and it is admitted by his friends who have been called as witnesses in his behalf. And as distrust toward one side leads to counter distrust, recriminations followed, in which Mrs. Brokaw sometimes showed suspicion toward her husband. The recriminations developed into bitter differences, followed, however, by mutual forgiveness and temporary reconciliation.

"In view of the charges made, it should be stated that the evidence does not show that the defendant was habitually intemperate. On the contrary, he appears to have been moderate in that respect, although in his nervous condition any indulgence whatever was stated to have been forbidden by his physicians.

"In view of many contradictions arising in the mass of testimony, the court looks first at the written agreement of Feb. 21, 1908—within about four months of the marriage—which was prepared at Fairview, N. C., by Dr. Battle. From the professional relations he sustained to the parties, as well as his long acquaintance with the defendant, the doctor's testimony in regard to the agreement dictated by him and written out by the defendant's secretary, becomes important. The agreement was signed by the defendant, followed by Mrs. Brokaw's signature in concurrence, and was witnessed by the Marquise Hermosa, a close personal friend.

"Walter Byford, the secretary, and Dr. Battle, who was called as a witness by the defendant, testified that a serious difference had arisen, which occasioned injuries to the plaintiff's health, producing a condition of hysterical collapse, and that this agreement had been drawn up in order to arrange a temporary separation between the parties. By it the defendant promises to submit the differences to attorneys, with this significant clause: 'In the meantime I also pledge myself to leave Mrs. Brokaw unmolested in every manner whatsoever.'

"This instrument, prepared and witnessed by the defendant's friends, is strong evidence that the plaintiff had been molested and confirms the statement of Dr. Battle that the molestations were injuring her health."

The court finds that the forcible breakings into of Mrs. Brokaw's apartments by her husband in the day time and at all hours of the night were injurious to her health. It does not appear, the court states, that these acts of Mr. Brokaw's were from motives or with the intention of causing injury, but their repetition against her remonstrances and the advice of physicians produced nervous shocks, sometimes driving her into hysterical conditions, from which she was entitled to be protected.

"The evidence of the defendant's means and yearly income," the Justice says, "is not clear or convincing. The defendant declined to testify to the correctness of the statement presented at the conclusion of the trial, which showed acknowledged assets of $1,639,939 and a gross income of $71,000, from which was estimated a net yearly income of $46,706. In the defendant's affidavit upon the motion for alimony he stated his yearly income was $70,000.

"The indefiniteness as to the defendant's personal property and the nature of the investments disclosed at the trial raises the question whether some provision for security for the payment of the alimony should not be embodied in the decree. Although the defendant is a freeholder with a legal residence within the county, the question whether or not to provide for such security is reserved until the settlement of the decree.

"The decree, therefore, should direct alimony as herein fixed shall begin from the date of the entry of the decree for the maintenance and support of the plaintiff during her natural life, such payments not to be in lieu of the plaintiff's right of dower in the defendant's real estate."

Mrs. Brokaw declined last night to discuss in any way Justice Putnam's decision in her favor.

Murphy and Gaffney See the Mayor.

Charles F. Murphy called upon Mayor Gaynor at the City Hall again yesterday and was with him for some time. Neither would discuss the nature of the conference. James Gaffney of the Bradley-Gaffney-Steers Company and the old Murphy company, the New York Contracting and Trucking Company, also had a talk with the Mayor. There were rumors just after the Mayor came into office that Gaffney would be his Street Cleaning Commissioner.

HOME LIFE IN THE SCHOOLS.

McAneny Hopes to Put Them in Closer Touch—Appoints Women.

Borough President McAneny announced yesterday appointments to fill the vacancies on the local School Boards caused by expired terms and resignations. Eight reappointments for five years were made. In his new selections the President named several women. In his statement accompanying the announcements Mr. McAneny declared that he intends to revise the system of conduct of the local boards so as to have them of more benefit to the schools of the city.

"I am convinced that the local boards, as factors in the school educational organization, have never been properly developed," said he. "Their functions, as fixed by Sections 1,087 and 1,088 of the charter, have to do principally with visiting and neighborhood work. They are expected to advise and recommend measures to the Board of Education rather than to act upon their own initiative, but they can be made extremely useful.

"I propose, for one thing, to invite the whole body of local Commissioners, of which there are 110 in all, to meet perhaps two or three times a year in the Council Chamber at the City Hall for the purpose of exchanging notes as to methods and to listen to officers of the Central Board of Education or others who can readily be brought in touch with them in this manner.

"With closer co-ordination of common policy governing the work throughout the city I am sure that the boards in time may be made valuable auxiliaries to the Educational Department, and that, incidentally, and through their activities, the department may be brought much closer to the homes in every-day life of the people.

"In selecting the present list of appointees I have made a point of securing the presence of at least one woman on each board, and, where practicable, two. Several of the boards, as I found them, had no woman membership at all. The fact that I have used many of the vacancies for this purpose accounts for the apparent predominance of women in the incoming class of Commissioners.

"So far as possible I have selected persons who have had to do intimately either with educational, settlement, or recreation work. In eight cases I have reappointed the retiring members. In canvassing for the new Commissioners I have had the very valuable aid of the Public Education Association and of other bodies interested in school work."

The new appointees are:

First District—DANIEL C. OLIVER, 204 Lafayette Street; reappointed for five years.

Second—The Rev. RUSSELL S. GREGORY, 61 Henry Street, pastor of the Church of the Sea and Land; five years. Miss FLORENCE E. BOYDEN, 48 Henry Street, director of class work in clubs for girls at the Jacob Riis Settlement; three years.

Sixth—Mrs. GERTRUDE DAY MONTGOMERY, 86 First Street; Vassar College, 1904; associate worker at the College Settlement; five years.

IN NEW JERSEY.

Edgar Smith of 23 Boston Street, Newark, will probably have to undergo an operation for the removal of a two-inch wire nail from his throat. Smith said that he had sniffed the nail through his nose, and in an effort to dislodge it sent it into his throat.

The Newark Young Women's Christian Association is much agitated because of the chance that a restaurant on the order of large Broadway resorts will be located across the street from its $300,000 home soon to be erected. The application for a liquor license by a Newark brewing concern caused inquiry to be made as to whether or not it was proposed to open a saloon at the site in question, and this revealed the restaurant plan.

Vice Chancellor Stevens, sitting in Chancery Chambers, Newark, yesterday, made an order directing Frank L. Driver, a member of the Essex County Board of Freeholders, to pay his wife, Mrs. Minnie E. Driver, $1,800 alimony a year. Mr. Driver said in court that they had separated by mutual consent after fourteen years of wedded life.

Montclair, which is enjoying a building boom, is threatened with a strike that promises to be far reaching. The Montclair Building Trades Council has sent a circular letter to all builders there, stating that "on and after May 1, no union man affiliated with any trade represented in this council shall be permitted to work on any job in this jurisdiction where a non-union man is employed." About half of the bosses in Montclair are running open shops.

Bishop John J. O'Connor of the Newark Catholic Diocese has appointed the Rev. John A. O'Brien rector of St. John's Church, Roselle, to succeed the Rev. George F. Brown at St. Mary's Church Rahway. Father Brown has been named as rector of the Church of the Assumption at Morristown. The Rev. Charles Doyle, for the last two years curate at the Church of the Sacred Heart of Bloomfield, will succeed Father O'Brien.

William Cole, a lumberman, who lives near Hackettstown, said yesterday that a few nights ago he opened the door of his home and inadvertently admitted a strange dog, which tried to bite the members of the family. Cole shot at the animal. The explosion of the shotgun put out all the lights. As soon as the lamps were relighted Cole found the dog dead under the table. The animal, he learned later, had been terrorizing the surrounding country, biting dogs and horses.

The vexed question of the return to the Court of Errors and Appeals bench of Judge Vredenburgh was apparently settled in the negative at Trenton yesterday when it was learned that Commissioner of Labor Lewis T. Bryant of Atlantic City had refused the proposal of Gov. Fort that he go on the bench in the place of Judge Vredenburgh and let the Chief Executive place another man in Bryant's place. It is now said that the Governor will place a Newark man on the bench.

The New Jersey Hotel and Inn and Tavern Keepers' Association met at Trenton yesterday and agreed on a new liquor bill which provides that liquor may be sold with meals in hotels after noon on Sundays. The new bill will make its appearance in the Legislature next week. The hotel men would like to see a penalty of $100 imposed on any man who sells liquor to a minor; they want the Hillery Drunkards Board of Guardians law repealed, and the Gunners' license law.

The Mayors of fifty-nine municipalities have notified Gov. Fort of their intention to be present for the first conference of Mayors of New Jersey cities in the Assembly Chamber to-day. The Governor will preside, and the problems of the municipalities will be gone over.

460,000 LBS. OF BEEF IN A STORAGE PLANT

300 CANS OF EGGS SEIZED

Government Inspectors Find Some Elsewhere Unfit for Consumption—Slight Drop in Butter.

Foreman James B. Throckmorton and nine other members of the Hudson County Grand Jury, accompanied by Prosecutor Garven and James F. Clarke, Clerk of the Court, visited the plant of Swift & Co. in Jersey City yesterday afternoon. They were shown over the premises by Supt. James Brady.

They found stored there 460,000 pounds of beef, 50,000 pounds of poultry, a quantity of lamb, mutton, and pork, butterine and sausage meat, and very large quantities of hearts, livers, and tripe. Mr. Brady informed the jurors that some of the poultry had been put in cold storage last April and that the beef began to come in last April, but the bulk of it was received in the Fall.

He explained that the reason why such large quantities were thus stored was that Swift & Co. brought meat to Jersey City in anticipation of the demand and trade requirements.

Other members of the Grand Jury kept watch yesterday on the cold storage plant of the Union Terminal Company at Twelfth and Provost Streets. Here it was charged that 36,000,000 eggs are stored. The jurors saw two double truckloads of eggs taken from the establishment and the carting of eggs seemed to continue throughout the day.

The Grand Jury will be in session again this afternoon, but the charge which Justice Swayze of the Supreme Court is expected to deliver has been postponed till next Wednesday. Among the witnesses subpoenaed to appear to-day are Mr. Brady and other employes of Swift & Co., Mr. McCarthy of the Union Terminal Company, and representatives of the Mercantile Refrigerating Company and Schwarzschild & Sulzberger. All these will bring their books with them. Subpoenas have also been issued to official of the Erie and Delaware & Lackawanna Railroads, who have been asked to produce their bills of lading for a year in order to show how much beef and other provisions have been delivered to the cold storage and packing houses.

A seizure of 300 cans of liquid eggs, representing 80,000 eggs, was made yesterday by United States Food and Drug Inspectors from the warehouse of a Manhattan concern on the ground that the eggs were unfit for human consumption. They were intended, it is believed, for sale to bakers. United States District Attorney Wise is expected to bring action against their owner.

The wholesale price of eggs dropped yesterday two points, from 32 to 30 cents a dozen. This was caused by the appearance in the market of good consignments of Western eggs. Butter was steady at 30½ cents a pound, and there was a somewhat firmer tone displayed. It is expected that the price of butter will stay at about the same level for the next month or so.

At the same time the retail quotations for butter were reduced some 2 cents, and the best grades were selling at from 31 to 33 cents a pound. The reason of the cut was the reduction by one of the large concerns with a chain of stores through the city. This made the small retailers come down in order to meet competition, and the increased demand that resulted strengthened the general tone among the wholesalers. It was explained yesterday that New York prices are now no longer so attractive to the producers as a few weeks ago.

A mass meeting, attacking present meat prices and the Beef Trust, will be held to-night at the Hotel Empire, under the auspices of the Gotham Club. The audience will be urged to go without meat for thirty days. Mrs. Mary E. Lease, Mrs. Thomas J. Vivian, the Rev. Dr. Madison C. Peters, W. R. C. Latson, and others will speak. Mrs. A. A. Brooks, President of the Gotham Club, will preside. Mrs. Brooks will also address the Federation of Women's Clubs, this afternoon, at the Astor, on the meat question. There will be an open air meeting against beef prices in Union Square Saturday afternoon.

NEW BLACK HAND FRILLS.

Detectives Trap Leader Who Called on the Spirits to Aid His Work.

Special to The New York Times.

PASSAIC, N. J., Feb. 3.—Two men and two women, all Italians, and alleged members of a "Black Hand" gang, were arrested here to-day by Detectives Turner and Crawbuck of the Passaic police force. Joseph Anzermo, supposed leader of the band, but posing as a trance medium, has succeeded, it is said, in extracting various sums from a number of Passaic Italians.

The plan was to send a Black Hand threat demanding a sum of money on a certain date. Anzermo would then call on the receiver of the letter, and, apparently going into a trance, would reveal its contents and agree to protect the person threatened from harm if he received a certain sum.

While working this scheme on Salvatore Nichi of 347 Montgomery Street today Anzermo was trapped by the detectives, who were hidden in Nichi's house. Anzermo's house was searched, and his sister, brother-in-law, and a girl, with whom he lived, were arrested as accomplices. All were held for the Grand Jury.

In the afternoon the class of '78 presented to the college five memorial stained-glass windows, which have been placed in the Council Room. There are three central panels, Socrates, Plato, and Aristotle; one symbolic and decorative panel containing the arms of the city and of the college, being placed on either side.

The class of February, 1910, was then received into the alumni. At 4:30 President Finley gave a reception to the graduates. They were:

Progress is the motto of the
"SHEFFIELD FARMS"
Why did the SHEFFIELD FARMS in October, 1909, sell 1,300,000 more bottles of milk than in 1907? Because the public believes that they are pioneers in the business; and that whatever the SHEFFIELD FARMS charge for their product full value is given the public for its money. Why did the SHEFFIELD FARMS spend $313,000.00 in 1909? To better the conditions of 1908. Why did the SHEFFIELD FARMS contract for half a million dollars of improvements for 1910? To better the conditions of 1909.
You can always rely on the quality of SHEFFIELD FARMS MILK.
Our Household milk, handled and delivered by the most scientific methods yet discovered, 8 cents per quart after March 1st.
